Editor's note: This article is part one of a two-part series addressing the veterinary vocation. This week's story introduces Peter Dippel, DVM, and gives an overview of the demands, challenges, and rewards of the animal care profession. Next week the story will trace a typical day on the field for the veterinarian.

SALUNGA (Lancaster Co.) — They are familiar figures on farms around the countryside.

Clothed in overalls with the sleeves chopped off, surrounded by sterilized tools, carrying a bucket of soapy water, and spouting difficult medical jargon without a second throught, veterinarians are a necessary and valued element of the agriculture industry.

They may spend their day performing surgery, doing pregnancy checks, taking milk samples, or diagnosing mysterious illnesses.

To kick off June Dairy Month, Pennsylvania's dairy promotion organizations arranged for the creation of a giant sundae on the capitol steps in Harrisburg. Alexa Stoner, ADADC Middle Atlantic, holds a ball of cherries which will top the sundae's 126 gallons of ice cream, whipped cream, and five gallons each of chopped nuts and chocolate and caramel syrup. Ridge Directs $10 Million For Equine Center

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Wednesday, Gov. Tom Ridge released $10 million in capital budget public improvement funds for the construction of a Pennsylvania Equine Center.

The center will be co-located with the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, and will host equine events and accommodate vendor exhibits.

"The new equine center builds upon our unprecedented commitment to Pennsylvania agriculture and the state's 60,000 farm families," Ridge said. "Pennsylvania's equine industry is a $5-billion-a-year industry. We're home to more than 200,000 horses. And now, we'll have a state-of-the art facility in which to showcase it.

"Pennsylvania makes the best agricultural products on the planet. With the new equine fa-

Greenhouse Growers Cut Pesticide Use

DAVE LEFEVER

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. visited Quality Greenhouses here Wednesday to promote an integrated pest management (IPM) program for greenhouse operations in the state.

With the goal of reducing pesticide use while controlling pest damage to crops, IPM practices include monitoring for insects and using biological agents (living organisms that control pests) rather than adhering to a fixed pesticide application program.

Hayes recognized Quality Greenhouses for its leadership in implementing IPM practices, pointing out economic, safety, and environmental benefits of the program.

"Pesticides are not a low cost

Des Moines, Iowa
June 4, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL YOUNG TURKEY PARTS AND BULK MEAT, Frozen, unless specified, cents per lb, delivered first receivers, part and full trucklots, as of June 4:

The trade sentiment was fully steady to firm on skin added mechaniccall separated turkey (mostly) and steady to fully steady on tom drums. Some sellers have noted an increased willingness by buyers, due to the strength of the various red meat trim items, to consider substitution of various red meat ingredients with more competitively priced poultry items resulting in increased domestic activity. Thigh meat trade sentiment was steady to fully steady. Demand was fair to good. Trading on frozen thigh meat was light at higher trending price levels for prompt shipments for export. Thigh meat offerings ranged light to adequate. Domestic trading centered on a light volume of fresh tom breast meat. Some 98% lean scapula traded at 130 and frozen +20% mostly at 20 cents delivered.

ATLANTA, GA.
June 6, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest was light during midweek trading as dealers remained very cautious and only assumed product for most immediate needs. Offerings of breast items were ample and discounted. Drums and thighs were clearing well. Wings were usually available. Movement through retail and distributive channels was light and disappointing, subsequently, where scattered sales were active, additional product was not needed. The market tone was weak and unsettled on breast items, about steady on the balance. Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

June 6, 2001

Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids continued to weaken due to harvest progress and lack of new export interest. Corn and soybean bids moved sharply higher on crop concerns due to continued wet, cool weather. Wheat steady to 2 cents lower. Corn 2 to 6 cents higher. Sorghum 6 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 8 cents higher.

Cool temperatures and heavy rains continue across the Midwest this week Some crop concerns pushed corn bids higher and crop ratings were lowered in some areas early in the week. Delays in soybean planting offered strength to bids. Lack of fresh export news, limited gains.

TRY COME? BUMBYE.

After Lei Day (May Day) in Hawaii comes King Kamehameha I Day (June 11), the celebration of the warrior king who united the Hawaiian Islands early in the 19th century. We also celebrate Hawaii for her lively contributions to the language, including some of our favorite Scrabble words: aa (rough volcanic lava), oo (an extinct bird), io (a hawk), and au (a swordfish). Less desperate players, merely inundated with vowels, might try oio (a bonefish), uwi (a bird), uku (a flea), or alala (a crow) "Pidgin English" is spoken by about half the population of Hawaii Their "try come" is something like "please," and "bumbye" resembles "by and by."

No pilikia, no huhu... (No worries, no anger...)

–Hawaiian song by Margarita Lane

USDA Tilts Butter-Powder Support Prices

- Nonfat dry milk falls 10.32 cents to $0.90/pound.
- Butter increases 19.99 cents to $0.8548/pound.
- Cheese prices remain unchanged.

USDA announced on May 31, 2001 an adjustment in the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) purchase prices for dairy products under the dairy price support program. The support price for nonfat dry milk was lowered 10.32 cents per pound to $0.90 and the support price for butter was raised 19.99 cents per pound to $0.8548. The cheese price was left unchanged.

This change in the price support program was anticipated. Last year (fiscal year 2000), the CCC purchased about 48 percent of domestic production of nonfat dry milk. And as of April 1 this year the CCC reportedly had 772 million pounds of nonfat dry milk on hand. That is equal to year's worth of domestic use! The government was clearly stockpiling surplus powder and had no plans for its use.

The dairy price support program was created in the early 1950s to support the manufacturing price of milk at a specified level that changed over time. The 2001 Appropriations Bill extended the price support program through calendar year 2001 at the 2000 support price of $9.90 per CWT. By supporting the manufacturing price of milk, the USDA essentially provides a floor to farm-gate milk prices.

The support price program works by offering to purchase surplus amounts of cheese, butter, and nonfat dry milk at specified prices. These prices are computed in relation to the $9.90 support price for milk. On January 1, 2001, USDA used the formulas from the federal orders to compute CCC purchase prices at $1.1314 per pound for block cheese, $1.0132 for nonfat dry milk, and $0.6549 for butter.

The price support program has a direct impact on farm-gate milk prices. Last year cheese prices fell below the CCC purchase price for cheese. Very few cheese plants in the West wanted to sell cheese to the government. Nonetheless, it did provide a psychological support to cheese. That in turn kept the Class III price of milk from free falling below $8.57 per CWT. That provided minimum support to all federal orders that had Class III sales.

The price support program had a very high level of support for nonfat dry milk at $1.01 per pound. In fact, many in industry argued it was "too high." This distortion in prices resulted in very limited commercial use for nonfat dry milk. Imports of Milk Protein Concentrates, or MPC's, increased into the U.S. in reaction to the high price of nonfat dry milk.

The high powder price also unintentionally raised the Class IV price of milk used for nonfat dry milk and butter production. That's because of the formula for Class IV defined in federal order reform. A higher Class IV price also raised the Class II and Class I prices. Thus producers in federal orders with significant sales of milk used for Class I, II, and IV purposes (that is, the Northeast and Southeast) received high and stable farm-gate milk price thanks to the support price for nonfat dry milk.

The farm price impact of this adjustment is not as clear as some might argue. On the one hand, the National Milk Produces Federation, a group that represents cooperatives, released a report that this move will lower the Class IV price by $0.90 per CWT and reduce dairy farm income nationwide by $818 million. This analysis of course assumes that nonfat dry milk prices will fall 10.3 cents per pound to $0.90 for the rest of the year.

It is likely that this will not occur because the export market for powder is very tight right now. Europe has very limited supplies of powder because of the outbreak of food and mouth disease. World prices for nonfat dry milk are close to $1 per pound.

And, because of the price adjustment by USDA, U.S. prices are now very competitive in world markets. Thus world trade will likely keep nonfat dry milk prices from dropping the full 10.3 cents.

What we do know is that the rise in the butter CCC purchase price will have no impact on the domestic price of butter. That's because the Grade AA butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange are trading at levels well in excess of the new CCC purchase price. Who would want to sell butter with a market value of $1.91 per pound to the government for $0.8548 per pound?

The futures markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reacted immediately to the news from USDA. Class IV futures prices fell 40-50 cents per CWT for the months June 2001 September 2001. Class IV prices, however, are still at very favorable levels, peaking at $14.95 per CWT in August 2001. And this market reaction does not represent the final word on the ultimate price impacts.

USDA chose a very favorable time to make an adjustment that most in the industry knew would ultimately have to take place. Milk prices are high and climbing even higher. Powder production in the U.S. is likely to be below a year ago. And the international market is looking for an alternative source of powder. USDA's only other choice would have been to build more underground storage in Kansas City!

Ag Secretary, Egg Executive Speak Out On Egg Safety

WHITEMARSH (Montgomery Co.) — It starts with the chick and results in a safer egg. That was the theme of an event here recently at Clemens Market to highlight PEQAP, the farm-to-fork Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program.

"Egg safety is especially important as we start a season of warm-weather activities and consumption of many eggs and egg-based foods, and it is especially timely as we hear about food safety concerns in other nations," said Paul D. Sauder, president, Sauder's Quality Eggs. "We want shoppers to look for the PEQAP seal so they can to take advantage of our state's premier egg safety program."

Joining Sauder to promote PEQAP was Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes. The department helped develop the program and supports PEQAP consumer education efforts.

"Most consumers know eggs are an economical source of important nutrients and part of a balanced diet. We want them to know that PEQAP eggs are produced with safety, as well as high quality and low price, in mind," Sauder noted.

Sauder, one of the founders of the PEQAP program, delivers 150 million dozen eggs a year to the northeastern U.S. market through supermarket chains and independent grocers. Sauder's is a Lancaster-based, family-owned business established in the 1930s.

To increase consumer awareness, Sauder's has erected PEQAP billboards along I-95 in the Philadelphia area, north of the Street Road exit and south of the Allegheny Avenue exit, where they can be seen by hundreds of thousands of people each day.

"The consumer wins because through PEQAP, the industry and government are working together, tapping our expertise and resources to institute management practices that minimize Salmonella enteritidis contamination of chicken (shell) eggs," said Sauder.

Salmonella enteritidis may infect the ovaries of healthy-appearing hens and contaminate an egg before the shell is formed. People eating contaminated eggs that aren't properly prepared can suffer flu-like symptoms, usually within 12 to 72 hours after consumption. The illness usually lasts four to seven days and can be most serious for infants, the elderly, and those with impaired immune systems.

Launched in 1994, PEQAP is the nation's first egg safety program and is even more stringent than the federal program that was proposed in 1999 and implemented in 2001.

"We know that food safety is high on the list of public concerns and believe the investment in the PEQAP process is well worth the cost for the added safety assurance," Sauder said. "And it's good business, since buying eggs with the PEQAP seal should be a consumer priority."

PEQAP addresses potential contamination in all the steps of egg production, from purchase of chicks through the refrigeration of the egg. To win the PEQAP seal, producers must follow best management practices, such as:

- Egg testing.
- Monitoring and testing of chicks, pullets (young hens) and layers.
- Manure sampling and culturing.
- Biosecurity precautions at farms, such a biosecurity suits and disinfecting processes for visitors.
- Criteria for processing and packaging, including employee and package sanitation.
- Carton coding and record keeping.
- Rodent control.

About 22.5 million layer chickens are monitored under the program that was developed by the state's Department of Agriculture with PennAg Industries Association and leaders of the egg and poultry industry. PEQAP also is supported by Penn State University, the University of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission, the Pennsylvania Department of Health, and the federal Food and Drug Administration, Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition.

Consumers — who eat about three billion eggs a year in Pennsylvania, or 245 per person — can continue egg safety precautions with these storage and preparation steps:

- Buy eggs with the PEQAP symbol.
- Keep eggs refrigerated.
- Refrigerate cooked eggs and egg-containing foods.
- Don't undercook eggs (whites and yolks should not be runny).
- Wash hands thoroughly after handling raw foods, including eggs.

Also participating in the consumer education event at the Clemens were Jim Shirk, assistant vice president, PennAg Poultry Council, and Ron Hunsberger, Clemens store manager.

Pennsylvania is the nation's fourth largest egg producer (after Ohio, California, and Iowa), producing about 5.8 billion eggs annually for in-state consumption and export. Pennsylvania is the largest food processing state in the northeast and one of the only states with significant employment in most sectors of the food industry.

Funds To Defray Organic Certification Costs Available To Producers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently announced the availability of $1 million in fiscal year 2001 funds to share the cost of organic certification in Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

Each producer is eligible for reimbursement of up to 70 percent of its cost of certification, not to exceed $500.

The cost-share program will assist eligible organic crop and livestock producers in transitioning into the new National Organic Program and provide an incentive for early adoption of the national standards by certifying agents and producers.

To be eligible, a production operation must be located within one of the states named above and must have been certified by a certifying agent as of December 21, 2000.

Funds will be distributed to the states on a pro-rata basis, depending on the number of certified organic producers within each state. Each state is allowed 4 percent of the total amount granted as an administration fee.

Applications by states for federal assistance and cooperative agreements must be requested from and submitted to Robert Pooler, Marketing Specialist, National Organic Program, USDA/AMS/TMP/NOP, P.O. Box 96456, Room 2510-South, Ag Stop 0268, Washington, DC 20090-6456, (202) 690-3655, fax: (202) 205-7808, or e-mail bob.pooler@usda.gov. Additional information may be found at the National Organic Program's homepage at www.ams.usda.gov/nop.

USDA Announces Adjustments In 2001 Purchase Prices For Milk And Milk Products

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA announced Thursday that its Commodity Credit Corporation will increase the price it pays for butter by 19.99 cents to $0.8548 per pound, and decrease the price of nonfat dry milk by 10.32 cents to $0.9000 per pound.

The purchase prices for block cheddar and barrel cheese remain unchanged at $1.1314 and $1.1014 per pound, respectively. The 2001 Appropriations Bill extended the price support program through calendar year 2001 at the 2000 support price of $9.90 per hundredweight of milk with an annual average milk fat content of 3.67 percent. The changes are effective May 31.

The decision to change the butter and nonfat dry milk prices was based on an accumulation of nonfat dry milk stocks in quantities well above USDA's ability to use the product; the level of expenditures to USDA, and significant market distortions. The Agricultural Market Transition Act permits the USDA to adjust the balance between the purchase prices of butter and nonfat dry milk twice each calendar year under the Milk Price Support Program.

Further terms and conditions for purchases of dairy products will be announced later.

President Bush's Supplemental Spending Request Includes $35 Million To Guard Against Foreign Animal Diseases

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The President's FY2001 supplemental appropriations request to Congress will include an additional $35 million for the USDA to enhance activities designed to protect U.S. agriculture from serious animal disease threats such as foot and mouth disease (FMD) and bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE).

"Given the various foreign animal disease outbreaks in other parts of the world this year, USDA has been conducting a top-to-bottom review of its core programs to ensure we have the necessary resources to protect American agriculture from devastating animal diseases," said USDA Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "These additional funds will help strengthen these important programs."

Components of the FY 2001 supplemental request include:

- $4.5 million for inspections at U.S. borders and ports of entry for passengers and cargo arriving from other countries, with a special emphasis on those countries affected by FMD and BSE.
- $24.6 million for additional veterinarians and animal health assessments to ensure that foreign animal diseases would be detected quickly should they ever penetrate U.S. borders. This includes $13.5 million to strengthen state surveillance and infrastructure programs.
- $1.9 million for contingency planning for immediate control and eradication in the event of a foreign animal disease outbreak.
- $1.7 million for technical assistance worldwide to monitor diseases and help those trying to control and eradicate them.
- $2.3 million for continuous improvement of tools and technologies through research.

"While we have been vigilant for years and have successfully prevented many foreign animal diseases from entering our country, recent outbreaks of foot and mouth disease across the world and ongoing concerns about BSE underscore the need to strengthen our safeguarding system," Veneman said.

Earlier this year, in the wake of FMD outbreaks in Europe and other countries, Veneman authorized $32 million in spending for the hiring of 350 new inspection personnel and the doubling of USDA's canine inspection teams. This was in addition to nearly 400 inspectors already being hired during 2001 and another 200 being reassigned from other program areas.

USDA has taken an integrated approach to protecting the United States from FMD and other diseases. This has included prohibiting shipments of products from high risk countries; increasing personnel at ports of entry; tightening regulatory enforcement; increasing surveillance of incoming passengers and cargo; enhancing monitoring and surveillance of domestic livestock; strengthening federal, state and industry coordination; implementing public education campaigns; and dispatching experts to other countries to assist in containment efforts. USDA continues a top to bottom review of these core animal and plant health programs to ensure it has the necessary resources to prevent foreign animal diseases from entering the U.S. and have the ability to eradicate such diseases should they ever enter the country.

American National Cattlewomen Introduce New Website

DENVER, Colo. — There is a new strong voice on the internet for the cattle industry since www.ancw.org was recently completed by the American National CattleWomen, Inc. (ANCW).

Created through the combined effort of ANCW and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the website has undergone many exciting changes.

Along with a new home page that invites you to continue through the website, ANCW has also added new information regarding the Beef Promotion Project and the American National CattleWomen Foundation. Additional plans are being made for a new Legislative Action Network page, which will outline issues important to the beef industry, and a new state sharing page, which will promote increased communication between ANCW state affiliates.

"The website will provide a new level of communication among the organization, its affiliates and those who want to know what we're doing and what we're about," said Judy LaGrone, ANCW president and a beef producer from Fouke, Ark.

"We're excited about how this technology will help us deliver our messages."

The website will continue to provide access to up-to-date information regarding ANCW Membership, the National Beef Cook-Off, the National Beef Ambassador Program, educational materials such as Wow That Cow! and upcoming ANCW events.

Farm And City Day Set At North Museum

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The North Museum will hold its fourth annual Farm and City Day on June 23 at 400 College Avenue in Lancaster. Times are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost is $4 per person, North Museum members are free.

This year, in addition to the usual Farm and City activities such as a petting zoo and sheep shearing, special topics will be examined that are current and important. Foremost of these is the issue of Mad Cow Disease (BSE), which sent the European beef market into a panic last year from which it is yet to recover. Dr. John Roberts, a veterinarian for the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry will explore what this disease is and how it could threaten the beef industry world-wide. Dr. Roberts will be joined by local farmer Don Rank, who will give a local perspective on this important topic. Presentation at noon.

There will also be a presentation on Amish Farming Technology in the 21st Century by Gary Martin, former editor of the New Holland Farming News. Gary will share the many ingenious ways that the Amish solve technical problems without conventional sources of power. Presentation at 2 p.m.

Jeff Stoltzfus will give an entertaining look at the history of the Leola Vegetable Auction. Learn how a failing local auction was taken over by local Mennonite farmers and is now a $5 million annual enterprise. Presentation at 11 a.m.

In addition to the above programs, the following activities will be ongoing throughout the day.

- A working bee hive with presentations by the Lancaster Bee Keepers Association.
- A visit by National Honey Queen Rence Blatt.
- Samples of honey by Dutch Gold Honey company.
- Incubation and chick hatching exhibit by the Lancaster Poultry Association.
- Penn State Master Gardeners with an interactive insect program.
- Sheep shearing by the Lancaster County 4-H.

For additional information call Jeff Howe, event coordinator, at (717) 291-4149.

Farm and City Day is sponsored annually by Wenger's Feed Mill of Rheems.

Young Farmers Survey Extended

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Farm Credit System (FCS) Foundation, Inc., has just made available its "Barriers to Success Survey" in a Spanish-language version and is extending the survey period until September 1. "We want to make sure that Spanish-speaking, and young and beginning farmers and ranchers have access to this landmark survey," said John Hays, vice president for national programs.

The FCS Foundation is seeking all farmers and ranchers in the U.S. who are either young (between the ages of 18-35), or beginning (have less than 10 years experience), to fill out a confidential "Survey on Barriers to Success" at the following sites, in English, at www.surveyhost.net/barriers/, or in Spanish, at www.surveyhost.net/barriers/spanish.

Respondents who choose to provide contact information will be eligible to win an all-terrain vehicle of their choice, valued up to $6,000. Some Farm Credit System lenders are sponsoring additional local incentives in specific geographic regions of the U.S. More information on the Foundation and the survey can be found at www.fccouncil.com/fesfound.

Data from the survey will be analyzed and made available broadly to policy makers so that recommendations can be developed for the next Farm Bill. As a reason for the survey, Hays referred to the latest USDA census data (1997) that indicates there are 152,156 young farmers between the ages of 18 and 35. The census makes no effort to identify beginning farmers, those with less than 10 years experience. "The USDA counts a farmer only if that farmer is the most senior decision-maker for that operation, i.e., they are the oldest. Junior partners or other owners of closely-held farming operations are not counted. As a result, there's a potentially large population of young and beginning farmers and ranchers in the U.S. out there who are being ignored," added Hays, "We want to change that."

To date, 129 firms/organizations are providing in-kind support for this survey initiative. "The Foundation is grateful for the number of organizations that have supported the Foundation's efforts since the study began on March 1, and we encourage other entities to join us in this worthwhile effort," said Hays. Organizations that would like to provide a link to the survey on their home page or that would like additional information should visit www.fccouncil.com/fesfound, or call Hays at (202) 879-0853.

The Farm Credit System Foundation, Inc., is a charitable foundation created by the Farm Credit System to promote the education and development of rural America's young men and women and to provide funds for research on issues relevant to young, beginning, and small farmers and ranchers. For more information on the FCS Foundation, contact John Hays, vice president at (202) 879-0853, or via e-mail, hays@fccouncil.com.

Rural Home Ownership Rate Remains High

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Home ownership in rural America continues at more than 75 percent for the year 2000, according to current figures released by USDA as part of National Homeownership Week, June 2-9.

"Today, America celebrates an all-time high 67 percent in the rate of home ownership across all of America," said USDA Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "In rural America, the home ownership rate is even higher at 75 percent. When a family invests in a home, they are making an investment in their future that not only benefits the community where they live, but our nation as a whole."

USDA Rural Development loan and grant programs help seniors and lower income families make necessary improvements or repairs to their home, allowing them to continue to enjoy the benefits of homeownership. A recent example was a loan to Mabel Jorgenson, a 105-year-old resident of South Dakota, who needed financing to fix the roof on the home she has owned for the past 30 years. USDA assists the needs of rural Americans from seniors such as Mabel Jorgenson to the working family seeking to raise a family in their own home.

For Fiscal Year 2001 to-date, nearly 26,000 very low to moderate income rural families have received loan assistance to purchase a home, resulting in approximately 26,000 construction and support jobs.

APS Director To Discuss Hispanic Labor On Dairy Farms In Seminar

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The topic of Hispanic labor involves the issue of fair wages in return for demanding labor — primarily within the field of agriculture.

This issue has long been controversial due to the belief that Hispanic labor is cheap labor. F. Brandon Mallory, director of Agri-Placement Services (APS), will dispute this myth on Monday, June 11 when he participates in the Northeast Agribusiness Seminar. The seminar takes place at Cornell University in the H.H. Whetzel Seminar Room, 404 Plant Science Building.

"In New York State alone, at least 60 percent of seasonal farm workers are Hispanic, and even that is a conservative estimate," Mallory explains.

Mallory will be part of a panel titled "Hispanic Labor: Issues and Management Suggestions," which offers insights relevant to this topic during the session. In addition to the panel discussing Hispanic labor, issues such as food safety for lenders and the expectations of non-dairy provisions of the 2002 Farm Bill will be covered during the two-day Agribusiness Seminar.

"Production agriculture, which includes farms that produce goods, such as certain crops or milk, has been criticized from some organizations who say that agriculture is looking for a cheap labor source to exploit," said Mallory, " I think that the farm community can go a long way in showing that this is not the case.

There shouldn't be this reputation of farmers willing to pay less than what a worker is worth when they actually are willing to pay what a good, reliable work force is worth," said Mallory. "Farmers have Hispanic workers that offer quality work for the money they're being paid."

APS is a program designed to assist farmers by sourcing and training employees to meet the specific needs of a farm. Mallory founded this program roughly one year ago.

For more information on APS, call Mallory at 1-800-654-8838, ext. 447, or visit the Website at www.dairylea.com.

PYFA Summer Conference July 17-18

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Young Farmer Association (PYFA) Summer Conference will be conducted this year in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Association of Agricultural Educators (PAAE) Summer Conference of Excellence and the Governor's Institute for Agricultural Science Careers at Penn's Cave, Centre Hall, and the Penn State University, University Park, July 17-18.

This year's conference will allow attendees to again meet and share common interests and ideas with the PAAE members and agricultural-related professionals and teachers incorporating agriculture into the classroom.

The PYFA activities will commence on Tuesday morning at the Penn's Cave grounds in Penns and Brush Valleys. Penn's Cave is also the home of the Nittany Antique Machinery Association's show grounds and will afford an opportunity to step back into the state's agricultural heritage and see the equipment that started the mechanical revolution and automation to farming.

The Executive Board will meet at 9 a.m. at the grounds. Those arriving can register and partake of the hospitality table provided. Those that wish, can start their tours of Penn's Cave, visit the gift shop, or just relax on the grounds looking at the antique machinery and equipment or fellowship with others.

A barbecue chicken lunch will be provided at noon and subsequent time allowed to continue touring and fellowship. A playground is available for the children — bring your horseshoes or other lawn games if you wish to participate.

The hotel will be available about 3 p.m. to check in and a short trip of 18 miles will be required. The hotel is about a mile from the center of the activity with the PAAE and the Governor's Institute for Agricultural Science Careers at the Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel, where the PYFA will have its evening meal starting at 5 p.m. During the meal and afterwards, members will have time to visit and interact with the PAAE members and other educators.

On Wednesday morning, the group will be picked up by buses at the Penn Stater Conference Center to travel to your tour. The trip to the tour locations will provide you a panorama view of the beautiful countryside of Penn State Lion Country and surrounding farm communities. Following the tours, you will be returned to the Penn State Ag Arena for a luncheon after which you can either choose to take the bus back to the Penn Stater to depart for home or to stay for the afternoon tours of select Penn State Campus areas before returning for the evening "Agricultural Commodities" Banquet of local agricultural and farm businesses.

The Wednesday evening meal will be an additional charge. The conference registration fee is $52, which includes your luncheon and evening meal on July 17 and Wednesday trip and luncheon. As noted, the Wednesday's Ag Commodities Banquet will be an additional $17. The tours at Penn's Cave will be on your own and the fees range from $6.75 for children to $12.75 for adults for both of the tours.

Please return the registration form by June 13.

Free Brochure Encourages Public Feedback On Changing EPA Regulations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) considers major changes in farming and water quality regulations, researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences are providing a free guide that will help citizens understand the issues and implications.

"Shaping New EPA CAFO Rules: A Guide to the Proposals and Comment Process" is a fact sheet assembled by Charles Abdalla, associate professor of agricultural economics, and Alyssa Dodd, extension associate in agricultural economics and rural sociology.

"The guide highlights the important parts of the EPA-proposed regulations on large-scale animal agriculture or concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFO)," Abdalla said. "Farmers and other citizens have until July 30 to comment. Proposed last December, the regulations are extensive and complex — even for people who work in this area.

"This is the first major change in the regulations since the mid-1970s," he said. "Farmers and others involved with agriculture have the opportunity to influence the regulations and shape national policy. The guide helps people to understand the various components of the regulations — particularly those that are important to Pennsylvania — and to learn how they can make effective comments before the deadline. It's designed to help people grasp the big picture."

The fact sheet explains how to tell if a farming operation is a CAFO, highlights the changes proposed in the regulations, and gives specific suggestions on how anyone can make effective comments to the EPA.

"Audiences that will find the fact sheet useful include people involved in animal agriculture — such as farmers, agribusiness, feed suppliers, processors, and related businesses — anyone interested in water quality and the environment, and public decision-makers and elected officials. Township officials, for instance, need to know how the coming federal requirements will affect them," Abdalla said.

Abdalla said that EPA's willingness to hear from all sources provides citizens with an extraordinary opportunity to take part in important public policymaking. "Everyone benefits from broader public participation, as it stimulates discussion and more perspectives," he said. "These are complex issues."

The guide suggests both strategies for commenting as an individual and as a business or organization. It outlines submission requirements and offers seven tips on how comments can achieve maximum impact with agency reviewers.

"Be sure to cite the specific section of the proposed regulation that you're commenting on," Abdalla said. "It's also better to comment on changes to the requirements than to make broad statements."

Copies of the guide are available from Dr. Abdalla at (814) 865-2562. The fact sheet also will be posted on the Web at http://agenvpolicy.aers.psu.edu/cafo/.

York Jackpot Show July 28

YORK (York Co.) — The York County Jackpot Show is scheduled July 28 at the York County 4-H Exhibition Building near Bair.

According to Jackpot organizers, the show was formed by the York County Pork Producers to provide 4-H and FFA members another area to show and exhibit their animals, including hogs and lambs.

Organizers have acquired sponsors from the York County Pork Producers Association, Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association, and more than two dozen breeders and club pig sales throughout the state.

Jackpot awards include $250 for the champion and $150 for the reserve of each of the two species. The contest, open to 4-H, FFA, and Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Junior Association members, also provides a $75 award to the top York County bred animal.

Animals are shown by weight, including barrows or gilts and wethers or ewes. Health certificates are required.

Entry fee is $10 per head until June 30, and $20 per head afterward. Make checks payable to the York County Pork Producers and mail to Steve Wilson, York County Pork Producers, Rd. #2 Box 210, New Freedom, PA 17349. Include your name, address, and phone number, the number of head of swine or lambs, and total head you intend to show.

For more information, contact Wilson at (717) 235-3478.

According to Wilson, this is an "excellent opportunity for kids to bring both species."

Wilson noted, "In the Mid-West there are quite a few Jackpots for youth to show at all summer long."

The Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Junior Association is conducting various point shows, which they regard this one as, across the state. Contact Betty Lou Svonavec at (814) 926-2779.

RELIEVING HEAT STRESS IN DAIRY SHELTERS: AIR EXCHANGE

Dan F. McFarland
Extension Agent
Agricultural Engineer

Along with shade, an air exchange is one of the first steps to relieving animal heat stress.

The ability for dairy cows to get rid of excess heat is greatly influenced by the condition of the air surrounding them. Cooler, drier air increases the rate of heat loss and moisture evaporation from the cow's body.

Imagine sealing yourself in a cardboard box on a warm day. In this confined space, the air soon becomes warmer as it picks up heat from your body, exhaled air, and through the cardboard wall. Relative humidity also increases as the surrounding air gains moisture from respiration and evaporation of perspiration.

As the air nears saturation, sweat will not evaporate as rapidly. Uncomfortable even to imagine, isn't it? Opening the box allows the hot, moist air to be replaced with cooler, drier air, and almost immediately you become more comfortable.

Naturally ventilated shelters rely on wind currents and animal heat to draw stale air from the building and replace it with fresh air. Adequate sidewall, end wall, and ridge openings are necessary. During warm weather, sidewalls and end walls should be opened 75 percent-100 percent. A continuous ridge opening of 2 inches-3 inches per 10 feet of building width (8 inches minimum) is recommended for naturally ventilated dairy shelters.

Mechanically ventilated dairy shelters provide a more predictable air exchange than naturally ventilated buildings. Proper fan capacity, inlet size and location, and control are essential. They should provide a minimum air exchange of 1,000 cubic feet per minute (cfm) during hot weather.

Tunnel ventilation systems can provide a rapid air exchange accompanied by a cooling breeze in tiestall shelters. More than a decade of experience in stall barns indicates that more is better. Early tunnel design recommendations used 2.5 mph, or 220 feet per minute (fpm), to determine fan capacity. This rate provided an air exchange every 30 to 45 seconds in most stall barns, well over 1,000 cfm per cow. More recent design guidelines, defined by producers, use 350 to 440 fpm (4 to 5 mph), resulting in an air exchange every 20 to 30 seconds.

To provide the air exchange where it is needed, proper inlet sizing and placement is important with tunnel ventilation systems. Too small and the fans work harder to deliver less air. To large and outside wind currents can greatly interfere with inlet air direction and distribution. The best inlets allow the incoming air to enter "straight-in," uniformly across the width of the building. Nonuniform inlets, or inlets along the side, can create dead spots in the animal space.

Tunnel ventilation is also becoming popular in freestall shelters as well. However, special attention must be given to fan capacity, air speed, inlet location, and cow traffic patterns to offer the best benefit to the cows in the animal space.

A proper air exchange should surround each cow with cooler, drier air that can pick up moisture, heat, gases, and other pollutants. Without the proper air exchange, additional heat stress abatement efforts such as circulation fans and spray cooling are not effective.

Future articles will discuss the requirements and use of circulation fans and methods of using evaporative cooling to battle heat stress in dairy cattle.

Pleasant View Farms Expand Toward The Future

KRISTIN RUSSELL
Blair Co. Correspondent

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — The homestead of Pleasant View Farms is nestled in a beautiful fertile valley of southern Blair County known as Morrisons Cove.

Today, Pleasant View Farms comprises 3,600 acres, approximately half of which is rented ground. The farm includes 3,000 head of Holstein cattle, including more than 1,500 head of milking animals at two locations — heifers, calves, Holstein steers, and breeding bulls.

The farm partnership, owned by Rodney Metzler and sons, has a rich heritage with roots tracing back to Lancaster County.

In 1898, the Metzler family moved to Blair County from Lancaster. At that time, the Metzlers were Mennonites. Rodney's great-grandfather was a preacher in the Mennonite church. The family moved west because of a split in beliefs about Sunday School. The Metzlers moved to the Martinsburg area and the first church was located on the present-day site of the Metzler homestead. In the spring of 1898, there was a barn fire at the homestead and the barn that grandfather Metzler rebuilt still stands today.

Through the generations, the farm was passed on through the sons and fathers, each starting with a partnership in which each son eventually bought out his father. Rodney entered a partnership with his father, LC Metzler, right after he was graduated from high school. A few years later in 1969, Rodney bought out his father's share of the partnership.

In the ensuing years, Rodney purchased several dairy farms in the "Cove." At one point, the Metzlers were milking cows at four different farms. For 15 years, Pleasant View Farms consisted of dairy operations at three different locations.

In the mid to late 1990s, it was becoming apparent that something had to give. Operating dairies at multiple locations was inefficient. It was difficult to find and keep good help. The facilities were labor intensive.

In 1998, the Metzlers began milking at their new state of the art dairy facilities, built on the homestead, located southwest of Martinsburg near the Blair/Bedford county line. New barns, a modern parallel parlor, and offices were built by Kings Construction of New Holland. Today there are 1,100 cows milking at the new Pleasant View Farms dairy facilities.

The Surge double-25 parallel parlor makes milking a pleasant task. The fully computerized system features an inline drip sampler and flow meter for in house sampling and weighing. The freestalls and holding areas have slatted floors, an investment the Metzlers are glad they made.

The "milk house" facilities consist of a plate cooler and a direct load system. Pleasant View Farms is one of only three direct load dairy farms in Pennsylvania. The cows are milked three times a day, with about 200 cows through the parlor an hour. With milking and clean up, the parlor is only idle about three hours out of every day.

The Metzlers continue to milk cows at a second location known as the Piney Creek Farm. This location is home to 275 milking animals, 93,000 pounds of milk are shipped each day from the two locations together. Milk is sold to Dairy Farmers of America (DFA). The Pleasant View home farm milk is Order 5 and Order 7; milk sent to the south for fluid milk processing. The Piney Creek farm is under the Virginia Milk Commission Base program.

Both Pleasant View Farms boast excellent butterfat percentages and low SCC. The Piney Creek farm averages between 3.9 percent-4.0 percent butterfat, while the larger herd at the home place runs close to 3.8 percent butterfat. Both herds have very low SCC, most months less than 200,000. The Metzlers pass on the quality bonuses to their employees through incentive programs based on quality performance.

One improvement Rodney would like to see made with his new barn is a larger special needs area and mini-parlor to milk and care for treated cows. In fact, there are plans to add just such improvements within the near future, along with a freestall barn for an additional 400 cows.

In July 2000, the Metzlers purchased the former Mowry Farms in New Enterprise, Bedford County. This large multifarm purchase enabled the Metzlers to have more land for crops and manure disposal as well as a location for some much needed heifer facilities. This location now houses 500 heifers and has streamlined the daily heifer care duties. Previously, all the heifers were at different farms. The Mowry farm consisted of 600 additional acres. The Metzlers have since sold off some non-tillable acreage and rented some additional farm ground nearby.

In the heart of Morrisons Cove, where the majority of the Pleasant View Farms acreage is located, land values are strong. A neighboring dairy farm of 86 acres recently sold for $6,300 per acre. Land for agricultural use commonly sells for between $5,000-$6,500 per acre. Accordingly, rent in the area is expensive as well, often between $100-$150 per acre. The Metzlers' investment in the additional land in Bedford County has given them a more affordable base for crops and manure management.

The family corporation consists of Rodney Metzler, president and his wife Gretchen Metzler, vice president. The couple's two grown sons, R. Troy and L. Marshall, are also members of the Metzler Family LLC. Rodney and Gretchen believe it is very important to ensure that the farm can stay in the family and have invested in extensive estate planning. Their sons have important roles in the day-to-day operation of the farms.

Troy Metzler is the herd manager, overseeing the herd staff and the calf operation. Much of the herd records are kept on Dairy Comp. 305. There are two computers in the herdsmen's office. The milking parlor is managed by Scott Myers and Troy is assisted by herdsman Charlie Dively and assistant herdsman Matt Brink. Troy's wife Jennifer, works part-time on the farm, handling the payroll, employee scheduling, and assisting her husband with the farm's record keeping.

The Metzlers keep very extensive records on all animals on the farm and work diligently to stay on top of herd health issues. No small task in a herd of this size, but a very important part of Pleasant View Farm's successful management. Troy and Jennifer have two young children, a daughter Jenna, age 2½, and a son Noah Rodney, 5 months.

Marshal Metzler is the crops manager, overseeing all of the crops produced on the 3,600 total acres. He also oversees the maintenance and repairs of the equipment, which is managed by Gerald Clouse, shop and Tom Laird, combine.

The Metzlers raise nearly all of the feed fed on the farms, including 2,000 acres of corn, 120 acres of soybeans, 120 acres of barley, and the balance in alfalfa hay. Feed purchased includes some cotton, brewer's grain, and extra soybeans.

Marshall's wife Holly works part-time at another Metzler owned business, Metzler Bros. Truck Repair, as office manager. Marshall and Holly have a son Caulen, age 3½, and are expecting another child in early June.

Obviously, an operation of this size takes much delegation. The Metzlers employ a total of 21 full-time and seven part-time employees. Rodney notes that finding good employees used to be one of the biggest trials of the business, but since they have moved into the new facilities, this has not been a problem.

Rodney believes very strongly in good employee relationships. Rodney is not merely an office manager, he is just as likely to be seen helping Marshall in the fields as he is to be found taking care of business in the office. He thinks it is important that the employees know that you are in this business with them, not just on the sidelines giving orders.

The new office area is complete with an employee break room. The Metzlers provide their employees with a quarterly newsletter, The PVF Farmer. The Spring 2001 edition consisted of 21 pages of farm news, birthday and anniversary recognitions, notes from employee meetings, farm safety tips and interested articles reprinted from other ag sources. A benefit package is also offered to the full-time employees. The Metzlers treat their employees and their families to several special events throughout the year, including a Christmas party.

A monthly management meeting is conducted by Rodney, Troy, and Marshall for the managers of the various departments. This meeting is also attended by the herd vet and nutritionist. The meeting gives the staff the opportunity to communicate problem areas and work toward improvement.

There are weekly vet check-ups by local large animal veterinarians Joseph Itle and Shawn Orezeck. These visits are primarily pregnancy checks and trouble shooting. Troy and his staff manage the breeding and reproductive health of milking herd. Independent nutritionist David Polland balances the herd's TMR ration and provides the Metzlers with weekly service.

Another feature of the new barns and office area at Pleasant View is the parlor observation deck. This area enables the Metzlers to welcome visitors to their farms without compromising the farm's biosecurity. The observation deck also provides area school children with a bird's-eye view of a modern dairy farm at work and it makes a comfortable location for the monthly meetings.

Because of the herd size and proximity to residential dwellings, the Metzlers have a keen eye on waste management issues. Rodney believes that regulations in manure management will shape the future of agriculture, and sites this as his main justification for a large land base. He tries to stay involved with the ongoing discussion about waste management, offering his insights as a large producer and staying on top of the current regulations.

Rodney Metzler is a man whose motto is "never pass up an opportunity." He says that he was never "given" anything but an opportunity. From that first opportunity to buy out his father's share of the farm partnership, Rodney has taken many other risks that have paid off. Rodney was part owner in the local feed mill, Martinsburg Milling, for 11 years, until the partners sold out to Pennfield Feeds in 1996. He is also a partner in Wineland's Equipment, the local John Deere dealership. But the business that commands the most of his time off the farm is a partnership with his brother Don, Metzler Brother's Transport, Inc.

Metzler Brother's Transport was born of a need for a milk hauler during a time that Pleasant View Farms shipped their milk to an independent dairy. Seeing an opportunity for a new business that would compliment the dairy farm, the Metzler brothers began with one leased truck hauling milk from three farms, in addition to the Pleasant View Farms.

Today, Metzler Brother's Transport hauls 14 loads of milk a day, in addition to loads of commodities with a total of 47 trucks on the road.

After a few years in the trucking business, the Metzlers saw a need for a repair shop and turned that opportunity into another business. Metzler Brother's Tank, Truck, and Trailer works on all types of large trucks, specializing in tankers. Today, the repair business has 12 employees and a growing list of clients.

Rodney Metzler doesn't see the future of the dairy industry solely in the hands of large commercial operations. His heart is still with the small dairy farmers, who he calls "the backbone of our industry."

Rodney realizes that not everyone want to milk a thousand cows and doesn't support any changes that would force that on the dairy industry. He believes that if there is ever any type of milk pricing policy change in this country, such as a quota or downsizing to demand, it should protect the small farmers and make provisions for new start-ups.

He believes that the successful dairy producer will be the one that makes the most of every opportunity and is willing to cooperate with fellow dairy producer to make the business more profitable for all dairy farmers.

The homestead of Pleasant View Farms is nestled in a beautiful fertile valley of southern Blair County known as Morrisons Cove. Today Pleasant View Farms comprises 3,600 acres, approximately half of which is rented ground.

Central Susquehanna Extension Plans Grazing Meeting

DANVILLE (Montour Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is sponsoring a meeting for persons interested in pasture and grazing management and direct marketing of agricultural products.

The meeting will be Tuesday, June 12, at 7 p.m. at Gordon and Terri Roup's farm in Montour County. The Roups have 21 Limousin cows and 100 mostly Dorset ewes. They are using 140 acres of hay/pasture and have 165 acres fenced. They use a combination of conventional and marketing.

Take Mexico Road (get on Mexico Road from either Route 254 just west of Washingtonville or from Route 642 just east of Milton) and turn south onto Narehood Road at the Hansen Quarry. Go across the bridge and bear right and the farm is on the left about a mile from Mexico Road. Look for a sign for the meeting.

Participants are reminded to wear different shoes than are normally worn around their own livestock. For more information, call Dave Hartman, extension agent, at 784-6660 or 1-800-254-6470.

Ag Symposium Set For June 14

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) has scheduled its Ag Research Symposium Thursday, June 14, here at the Capitol Complex.

The symposium, which includes information on export opportunities, livestock and plant research, and information for a wide variety of producers, is scheduled from 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. at the Ryan Building, Room 205, in the complex.

Twenty-one research projects will be highlighted at the symposium. For more information, contact PDA's office of the secretary, (717) 772-2853.

Sundae On Tuesday At The Capitol

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Visitors to the capitol building on a warm Tuesday afternoon were treated to an ice cream sundae — or, more accurately, part of one — at a June Dairy Month kickoff event organized by Pennsylvania's dairy promotion organizations.

The event, which began at noon, drew a crowd as 126 gallons of Green's vanilla ice cream were stacked in a plastic recreational pool.

Five gallons of Hershey's chocolate syrup and five gallons of caramel syrup were topped off by five gallons of chopped nuts from Zimmerman's Nut Company in Harrisburg.

Whipped cream and a 12-inch ball of cherries crowned the creation.

According to Alexa A. Stoner, industry relations specialist, American Dairy Association/ Dairy Council Middle Atlantic served more 1,300 people with the help of 16 dairy princesses and agriculture secretary Sam Hayes to dish the ice cream.

This event was first for many of the dairy princesses who have been newly crowned. Dairy princesses Katie Nailor, 18, Perry County, and Sherry Plummer, Jefferson County, helped to hand out spoons and napkins to the crowd.

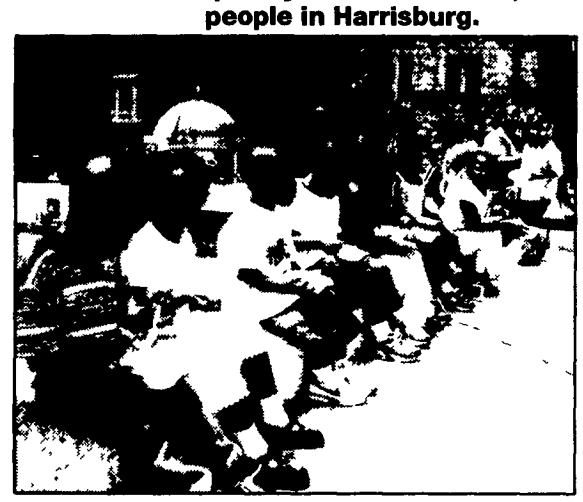
"We came a long way to get here, so I was hoping it would be something like this," said Plummer. "I was expecting lots of people and lots of ice cream, and that's what we got."

Additionally the Lancaster-based Green's sampled one of its newest ice cream flavors, Cotton Candy Confetti.

The American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program helped organize the event.

The finished product was quickly dished out to 1,300 people in Harrisburg.

Sixteen dairy princesses from across Pennsylvania came to help serve the generous scoops of ice cream.



Students of Colorful Future Day Care, Harrisburg, found their way to the event and their own bowls of ice cream.

Ice Cream Important To America

✔ Commercial production of ice cream began in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1851, by Mr. Jacob Fussell, now known as the father of the American ice cream industry.

✔ Ice cream was invented in China in about 200 B.C. when a soft milk and rice mixture was further solidified by packing it in snow.

✔ In 1921, the commissioner of Ellis Island made the decision to treat all incoming immigrants to a taste of something truly American by serving them ice cream as part of their first meal.

✔ National Ice Cream Month was designated by President Ronald Reagan in 1984.

✔ More ice cream is consumed on Sunday than on any other day of the week.

✔ Although chocolate and strawberry rank high as consumer favorites, vanilla still leads the way in ice cream sales. It accounts for 20 percent of all ice cream sales.

✔ Caramel ice cream is the fastest growing flavor nationally with its volume production increasing 49 percent in 1998. Mocha/coffee is also becoming more popular with sales up 15 percent since 1996.

✔ About 10 percent of the total milk produced in the U.S. is used in ice cream products.

✔ Americans consume about 23 quarts on average per person per year, which is more than is consumed in any other nation.

✔ It takes about seven quarts of milk to make a gallon of ice cream.

✔ About one quarter of the milk produced in Pennsylvania is made into ice cream products.

✔ Air is added to convert the cream and sugar mixture into the light and fluffy treat we call ice cream.

Where Medicine, Agriculture Meet

Lancaster Dairy Vet Gives Glimpse Into Colorful, Varied Job

wouldn't have it any other way.

Dippel, who began practicing in 1995, has decided that he has found his niche as a veterinarian. He works as an associate for Lancaster Veterinary Associates, a five-veterinarian practice based in Salunga.

Although he enjoys working with his dairy patients, developing relationships with the farmers is what keeps him in the industry.

Additionally "seeing cows come around as a result of what I've done, making money for the farmer by pulling a live heifer calf after a difficult calving — that's what makes this job enjoyable."

All In A Day's Work

Dippel's day begins at 8 a.m. with the ring of the phone. Typically farmers make their early-morning rounds, discover a problem, and call the practice. Their calls are routed into the veterinarians' homes, where the requests are divided up between the veterinarians.

In addition to calls, Dippel is a regular visitor once a month or every two weeks to several farms in the area he routinely covers.

Scheduled pregnancy checks make up approximately 50 percent of his work. Twisted stomach is probably the most common problem the veterinarians treat, constituting 30 percent of the "sick cows" work. Surgery or the toggle method usually corrects the situation.

Although the practice covers farms mostly in Lancaster and York counties, the farms Dippel will visit during the day may be fairly far apart. He estimates that he can travel from 30-100 miles a day and spend up to three hours in the car.

While he is out taking care of the day's calls, Dippel's afternoon may be lengthened by the sound of his beeper, when later calls come in.

"We can't make a scheduled appointment because we don't know what we'll be doing at each farm," he said. A farm visit, for example, may include a treatment recommendation and a shot, or a two-hour surgery.

During the day Dippel's calls may take additional time as he checks the ailing calf or provides an extra service such as castrating animals.

"You have to be extremely flexible to be a dairy veterinarian," he said.

Other services the veterinarians provide include castrating, dehorning, and performing a pregnancy check while they are on the farm.

Additionally, because of the comprehensive curriculum at veterinary school, the vets may help the producer develop the ration for the animals.

Besides the erratic schedule, makeshift restraint facilities also add an element of challenge to the vet's job. "You need lots of patience in dealing with cows — especially heifers," said Dippel, who may find himself treating animals tied to a fence post and squeezed by a gate.

"Most of the time, once they are restrained, they will stand and let you work on them." However "usually once a day I have a bruise somewhere," he said.

In spite of these challenges, however, Dippel uses words such "laid back" and "low stress" to describe his job, as he enjoys the flexibility of the schedule, the countryside travel, and working with producers.

The Examination Procedure

Armed with a thermometer, stethoscope, rectal sleeve, and bucket of water, Dippel proceeds with a routine examination while questioning the farmer.

He asks about the animal's eating habits, behavioral changes, on-farm treatments, how long she has been fresh, if she has had a difficult calving, and symptoms of illness.

The challenge, said Dippel, is piecing together the information supplied by the farmer with what can be determined during the examination for a correct, on-the-spot diagnosis.

"It is not an exact science," he said. "On the field we're limited to a physical exam, so we have to make a diagnosis based on that. In the hospital we could run tests or do an ultrasound examination."

The next step in the examination is taking the animal's temperature, the first way to help determine whether the cow is sick or not.

Normal temperature for a healthy cow ranges between 100.5 to 102.5. Dippel puts his stethoscope to the cow, listening to the inner workings of the animal, then flicks her side to listen for the telltale "ping" of a twisted stomach. Sunken eyes and cold ears are also examination tools to help Dippel make a diagnosis.

Diagnosing an animal, though usually fairly straightforward, may prove challenging since communication between doctor and patient is limited to only outwardly-displayed symptoms.

If diagnosing the illness stymies the vets, said Dippel, a valuable animal could be sent to the New Bolton Center for bloodwork, ultrasound, or x-rays for an in-depth examination.

"At veterinary school we got a proper education, so we shouldn't have too much of a problem diagnosing and treating animals. That's what we were trained to do."

Because of the extensive, broad range of training completed, a four-year veterinary school licenses graduates to practice on animals of their choice.

"We were tested on everything," he said. "Students must pass the national boards to practice in the country, along with individual states' examines, and they vary."

Biosecurity Important

Dippel washes and puts his tools of the trade in their proper places in the back of the car. The familiar brush, which he uses to thoroughly clean his boots between each farm, emerges as he begins his sanitation regime.

In addition changing overalls between farms sets a good example for biosecurity, said Dippel.

"Biosecurity will become more and more important, especially with diseases such foot-and-mouth," he said.

He finishes his scrubbing and puts the bucket and brush in their proper places in the back of the car.

With his station wagon trunk stocked with instruments and medicines, Dippel carries his office to the farm.

A medicine cabinet also housed in the back of his station wagon yields the necessary medication for Dippel's work and supplies farmers who often buy medicine on the spot.

Along with his medicine-cabinet-trunk, Dippel's work comes along with him on the dashboard, which is crowded with notebooks, maps, billing sheets, reference books, schedules, and client lists which miraculously stay in place even around the twisting corners of the back country roads.

Back in the office, extra supplies sit on tall shelves in the back room. A sterilization unit ensures the veterinarians' tools are properly sanitized and ready for the workday. Samples or milk or fecal matter are boxed and ready to send to laboratories to test for Johne's, bovine viral diarrhea (BVD), or mastitis.

A gas sterilizer ensures that the surgical packs used for surgery are clean and ready for use. Each veterinarian carries several packs in the car since, as soon as one is opened, the entire contents must be resterilized. However "we use most of the instruments during a surgery," said Dippel.

Learning About Livestock

A 1995 graduate of Cornell University's veterinary school, he completed his undergraduate work at a small college near where he grew up in the suburbs of Long Island, New York. Although he "always wanted to be a vet," the primary reason Dippel chose to become a veterinarian is to enter the mission field in a developing country.

Even though he did not have prior experience with large animals, Dippel knew that knowledge of livestock would be of most use in mission work.

Two short-term mission trips to Mongolia, organized by Christian Veterinary Mission, gave Dippel the opportunity to lend his expertise to a 300-head — ironically enough — Simmental dairy farm. Dippel and his wife, Stephanie, a sign-language interpreter, are still open to the opportunity of a long-term move to the mission field.

Dippel moved south after graduation because of Lancaster County's high concentration of dairy animals. He had also copmleted an extenrship he completed during veterinary school with Lancaster Veterinary Associates and enjoyed the practice and the area.

Next week watch for an on-the-job report as we follow Dippel on a typical day in the field as he takes care of dairy animals around Lancaster County.

His ever-present stethoscope pressed to the cow's side, Dippel listens to the telltale "ping" of a twisted stomach, a common problem in the dairy industry. Treatment will be either surgery, for the valuable animals, or the fairly new toggle procedure for older cows.

$10 Million For Equine Center

cility and the dramatic improvements we're making to the Farm Show Complex, Pennsylvania indeed will be home to the nation's premier agricultural showcase.

"If we are to ensure that Pennsylvania continues its global leadership in agriculture, then we must be willing to make the necessary investments to ensure our families can compete in the global marketplace."

Construction of the equine center will be part of the new expansion of the Farm Show Complex. A multipurpose arena in the new equine center will seat 1,500-1,800 people. The equine barn will be able to house 140 horses and will be connected to the new arena and the existing Farm Show Complex.

When construction is completed, the new Farm Show Complex and Equine Center will accommodate about 2,000 horses. Its design will accommodate state, regional, national, and international competitions.

Construction begins later this year and is scheduled for completion in fall 2002.

To ensure Pennsylvania agriculture continues its leadership around the globe, Gov. Ridge announced last year the largest-ever state investment in agriculture — about $90 million — that will help the state's farm families and agribusinesses to compete and thrive in the New Economy of the 21st Century.

This commitment to the future of Pennsylvania agriculture included $66 million to expand and refurbish the Farm Show Complex, and about $24 million for a new Livestock Evaluation Facility and an upgraded Veterinary training facility.

The approximately 250,000-square-foot Expo Center at the improved Farm Show Complex will include a trade show exhibit hall, meeting rooms and conference support facilities, and will be interconnected by a covered bridge with the existing Large Arena and exhibit halls.

Rural Health Workers

farmers with disabilities.

Val Schott, president-elect of the National Rural Health Association, said that advocacy for improving rural health care is not a matter of asking for handouts, but for rural communities to receive "equitable" access to medical attention, similar to that offered in urban areas.

"Equity is what we're asking for," Schott said.

Equity does not mean a downsized version of the urban system, he said, but one that meets the unique needs of rural people.

Schott pointed out the large contribution the health field makes to rural economies, citing a nationwide survey that showed 10 to 15 percent of all employees in rural areas work in the health field.

Furthermore, since their salaries are higher than average, health care workers in rural communities receive 15 to 20 percent of the total income in those areas.

Nevertheless, according to Schott, much still needs to be done to increase the supply of medical workers in many sparsely populated regions.

"One of the saddest things we see is people who grew up in a rural community who have to leave because they don't have health care," he said.

One obstacle to hiring doctors

Val Schott, president-elect of the National Rural Health Association, addresses rural health care providers from across Pennsylvania. The medical field makes an enormous contribution to rural economies, he said.

and nurses in rural areas is that they need to be able to handle many different kinds of cases. But it is those highly skilled in one field of medicine who receive the largest salaries and are in demand in the cities.

As "generalists" in low-population areas, rural doctors and nurses tend to be well-known figures in the community.

"It takes a special type of person," Schott said.

Dr. Neil Ellison of the Geisinger Medical Center explains a new palliative medicine program that pairs kids with older patients to help improve their quality of life.

Lisa Davis, director of the Pennsylvania Office of Rural Health, said that Pennsylvania has the highest rural population of any state in the country.

While rural hospitals tend to provide a "more personalized type of care," nurses and physician's assistants are often called on to do doctor's work, she said.

One inititative of the NRHA in Pennsylvania is the Medicare rural hospital flexibility program, which provides cost-share assistance to hospitals that have no more than 15 acute care beds. Schott said that the one of the services the program offers is easier referral to larger facilities in the region that perform specialized procedures, such as heart surgery.

AgrAbility Program

One program aimed at helping Pennsylvania farmers with disabilities is the AgrAbility program.

A statewide project with USDA backing, AgrAbility provides resources to individuals who want to continue farming but are struggling with a physical or mental handicap.

Services provided by the program include on-farm visits by rehabilitation personnel, information on assistive technology and modifications (such as adapting tractors to make them easier to mount and operate), and identifying possible funding sources to help farmers afford modifications.

According to PDA extension educator Dr. Connie Baggett, AgrAbility "can't do all things for all people, but we can make a good start."

Baggett said that a primary goal of the program is to prevent farmers from doing further harm to themselves as they go about their work.

AgrAbility services are available to hobby farmers as well as to those who farm fulltime.

Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences and Easter Seals are partners in the AgrAbility program. People interested in learning more about AgrAbility should contact project outreach coordinator Linda Fetzer at (814) 863-7868 or e-mail lmf8@psu.edu.

Palliative Medicine

Dr. Neil Ellison of the Geisinger Medical Center in Danville explained how his palliative medicine program strives to help suffering patients achieve maximum quality in life and in death.

The palliative medicine approach focuses on providing meaningful experiences for patients or family members experiencing grief and pain.

One key part of the program at Geisinger is pairing up kids with older people for various activities to help create a sense a home for patients.

"Many of us at this time have been removed geographically from where are roots are," Ellison said. Intergenerational activities aim to alleviate the stress this separation can cause.

Examples of intergenerational activities are an older person who teaches kids how to make quilts and, reversing roles, kids teaching older people how to use computers.

According to Ellison, the sense of purpose created by such activities can actually decrease the need for more conventional medical practices and drug therapies.

"I do believe we save money (by using palliative medicine)," he said.

Even so, Ellison said it is often hard to convince doctors of the value of palliative medicine, because many think they are already good at managing pain and death simply because they treat large numbers of terminally ill patients.

input," Hayes said. "With IPM, (growers use) no more pesticide than is absolutely necessary."

Tom Gawlas, manager at Quality Greenhouses, said that he has been involved in IPM for 12 years and it has lowered the costs of operation considerably.

As one of the first greenhouse operators in the state to use biological controls, Gawlas said that IPM methods have improved over the last decade. These include the development of safer, more target-specific pesticides, as well as better use of biological controls.

A key part of the IPM program is constant attentiveness to insect populations. "Sticky cards" that contain attractants to target pests are hung at various locations in the greenhouse. The number of insects trapped on the card over a specific period of time determine whether or not control measures need to be taken.

Gawlas said that IPM helps growers develop a philosophy for insect control.

"IPM is a decision process," he said.

Quality Greenhouses uses a combination of pesticides and biological controls to help grow about 70,000 chrysanthemums, among other ornamental crops.

Gawlas also said that marketing of the plants is enhanced by the IPM program, because buyers feel good about purchasing plants grown with less pesticide use.

Lyle Forer, director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Plant Industry, said that IPM as a recognized procedure first began in the late 1970s, principally among orchard growers.

In the late 1980s, IPM began to become more widespread for other types of crop operations.

Additionally, Forer said that 70 percent of Pennsylvania's public schools have adopted IPM practices to control pests on building grounds.

Rural Health Workers

In rural communities, palliative medicine can be particularly effective because it can build on strong family and community systems that are often already in place, Ellison noted.

Nursing Shortage

Rebecca Beatty of the Penn State School of Nursing outlined a crisis in nursing with special implications for rural areas.

"In 10 years we may have a major nursing shortage in Pennsylvania," she said.

According to Beatty, signs indicate that a shortage may already exist.

Citing an aging nursing force in Pennsylvania, nurse burnout from overwork, negative stereotyping, and the fact that it takes longer to fill rural nursing positions than urban ones, Beatty affirmed the great need for new nurses and called on health care facilities to treat their nurses fairly.

On The 'Moove' For More Dairy Goodness

This is the second week for more dairy delicious recipes entered in Lancaster Farming's annual drawing celebrating June Dairy Month.

Today's entries continue to show the versatility dairy products make possible. There are sure to be plenty of recipes for everyone's tastes.

Remember, the contest winners will be selected by a drawing. The list of winning names will appear in the June 30 issue. Keep checking for many more contest entries that will continue to be printed throughout the month of June.

If you are like most of our readers, you'll clip these recipes so that you'll have plenty of options for meal preparation whenever you want a guaranteed "mooey" delicious dish.

The Conleys take time off from dairy farming, but not from their search for new recipes.

Benjamin, 4; Gabrielle, 6; and Andrew, 18 months, love their mommy Wendy Schott's Pennsylvania Cream Cheese Cookies.

Anita Whipple is proud of her grandchildren, Katy Grace McCloskey, Ashlyn Whipple, Madison Whipple, and Zachary McClosky.

ENCHILADA CASSEROLE

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 package taco seasoning mix
1 cup water
1 small (12-14 ounce) can refried beans
10½-ounce can mushroom soup
16-ounces sour cream
4-ounce can mushrooms
10 count package tortilla shells
4 cups shredded cheddar cheese

Brown ground beef with onion. Add taco seasoning, water, and refried beans.

In separate bowl, mix one can mushroom soup, sour cream, and the mushrooms. Pour half this mixture into a 9x12-inch casserole dish.

Roll up meat mixture in tortillas and place on mushroom mixture. Pour the remaining mushroom mixture on top.

Cover with shredded cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Depending on how much you put into each tortilla, you may get 10-12 roll ups. Very delicious.

Our daughter ate this dish at a friend's birthday party, and we made it many times, sometimes for company. Everyone likes it.

We live on a dairy farm and with six children, we get lots of practice trying new recipes.

My husband and I along with our three children, Gabrielle, 6; Benjamin, 4; and Andrew, 18 months, live on a 15-acre farmette in York County.

Although we do not farm full time, there is still plenty of work that we share as a family. We have apple, peach, and cherry trees, and blueberries, strawberries, and raspberries.

I enjoy being in the kitchen cooking, baking, and canning fresh summer fruits and vegetables. I also enjoy sewing for my children and myself.

Our children enjoy exploring the woods and pastures and finding forts to play in. Gabrielle and Benjamin take swimming lessons and sing special songs at church. We enjoy biking, canoeing, visiting the beach, and attending our church campgrounds together during the summer.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

So what's there not to like about June?

Few months have as gentle and lovable a reputation as does this month of sweet and happy things.

After all, who could dislike the month in which the nine-month stretch of the school year ends? (Except maybe for some moms who have already heard the "I'm bored!" lament.)

Certainly not 99.99 percent of students, no matter how much they liked school or how well they did in it. And, at this point in their year, few teachers don't welcome — probably even more than the students — an extended vacation.

Especially gleeful are those for whom this June's last day of school is a last forever day of school or college, the solemn strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" rang through stadiums and auditoriums this past week. Few graduates I've ever known wished they could undo time and go back to start freshman classes again. At least not until several June's later.

And who could argue with a month in which blushing brides garbed in radiant white float down the aisles awash in lace, starry eyes, and dreams of a loving and happy life with their bridegroom who waits at the altar, a few steps away.

Many of those bridal visions in white carry close to their heart another of June's trademarks, roses. Though we tried to be frugal and economic in our planning for the one wedding we were responsible for some 10-plus years ago, a bouquet of pink roses was a special request by our then bride-to-be. It still hangs in our attic, the rosebuds dried, but recognizable.

My first rose to open in the garden, picked appropriately last week on the first day of June, was a fat, pink old-fashioned species, one with a wonderfully sweet, spicy "rose" fragrance. It's delightful scent belies the almost-lethal thorns, which liberally spike the stems beneath each fat, full bloom. This particular beauty of June is a beast, if one isn't careful wrestling it from the mother bush.

Before picking the rose, we enjoyed yet another of June's special gifts: fresh strawberries. Several boxes of fat, red, juicy berries turned up on the table on our back porch, along with two delicious personal-sized shortcakes. Where they originated from remains a mystery, since we've yet to pinpoint the generous donor.

It was a mistake, and someone left them on our back porch by accident or error...sorry. But, thanks!

We enjoyed them immensely.

Actually, there was something about the start of this June that wasn't so impressive: the woodstove. Or, rather, the need for it.

On the first night of June, The Farmer delivered to the basement porch a tiny stack of firewood, leftovers from a supply at the machine shed. Its purpose? Nudging a damp, raw chill from our old brick house. Surrounded by maple trees so thick they let little light — or sun's warmth — through, the dampness which settles into our old house built into the hill just seems to eat right into your bones. The kind of chill which, once it overtakes you, is hard to shake off, even with extra layers of shirts and sweaters.

Speaking of which, while the orange flames inside the fire began pushing off the dampness and replacing it with snugly warmth, I took Derra Dog for her daily evening walk to the ponds wearing not one, but two, sweatshirts over jeans, turtleneck and tee-shirt.

In June, mind you.

Most likely, a week from now, when you are reading this, June will have cranked its thermometer to 90-degrees and tales of woodstoves will sound ludicrous. My reluctant roses will have stopped shivering and flung blooms wide open to bask in the sun. Tomato plants in the garden will actually begin growing, rather than just sitting parked in the garden getting nibbled smaller each day by some nasty, nocturnal visitor. And, hopefully, sunshine will coax those juicy, sweet strawberries to keep ripening.

There are still several sections of that dry wood on the porch, stacked neatly in a corner, just in case we need them for later.

Like maybe on the Fourth of July.

USDA Reports Benefits Of Farm-To-School Alliances

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently issued a report on "How Local Farmers and School Food Service Buyers Are Building Alliances."

The report summarizes the discussions and findings of the USDA-sponsored Small Farm School Meals Initiative Southeast Regional Workshop, held May 1, in Georgetown, Ky.

The report notes that 94 percent of all farms in the United States can be categorized as small or limited-resource farms, grossing less than $250,000 annually. To enhance the earning potential of these farms, AMS has taken steps to facilitate direct marketing between small and limited-resource agricultural producers and local school districts.

The report addresses the importance and benefits of farm-to-workshop marketing, product preferences of the school food service buyer, factors that influence a school food service buyer's choice of vendor, potential barriers faced by the small producer, recommended approaches for breaking into the school food service market, and case studies of successful farm-to-school marketing initiatives.

While the report's focus is on the experience of small farmers and school food service directors in Kentucky, North Carolina, the Florida Panhandle, and Southern California, many of their experiences may apply to other regions of the country.

When Can Children Be Left Home Alone?

The hot question that parents spend countless hours agonizing over is "At what age should children be left at home alone?"

How do you know when children are ready?

No one can know for sure just when children can be left safely at home alone. Unfortunately, age is not an accurate predictor of maturity, common sense, or good judgment. A few children may be able to manage on their own around age 10, while many others need supervision well into their teens.

Occasionally adults make inappropriate or dangerous decisions about leaving children to care for themselves, as we learned from recent news reports. For the most part, however, parents struggle to be caring and responsible even when under great stress. The following questions will help such parents make sensible decisions about their children's welfare and whereabouts during the times when school is not in session.

Do your children want to be left alone? Is there evidence that they understand and can carry out the responsibilities of self-care?

Do you live in a safe, friendly neighborhood? Do you have an agreement with neighbors, relatives, or friends that they will go to the children quickly in case of an emergency? Are these people always available when the children might call? What are the back-up plans if children get an answering machine, busy signal, or no answer when they call?

Have you, as a family, checked your home for hazards and made necessary household repairs?

Have the children practiced, under your supervision, what to do if a smoke detector goes off? Do they know what to do if they suspect fire, a stranger knocks at the door, the phone rings, an electrical storm and power outage, a plumbing leak, or one of them is hurt or becomes ill?

For example, call them from a neighbor's house and pretend that you are a salesman; don't assume they know how to handle a call like this. It takes practice. It is important that they learn how to not tell the person they are "home alone."

Will the children have a telephone available, know how to use it, and have emergency numbers posted by every phone? Are the adults they might contact always available when the children might call for help or if lonely?

Have you, as a family, established clear rules about safety, television use, chores, homework, snacks, visits by friends, and visits to friends? Do you feel confident that your children will abide by these rules even when you are not there to enforce them? Have you made a written "to do" list for them to follow during the day?

If you have more than one child, are you sure siblings will not tease, frighten, or hurt each other? (mild, occasional squabbles are to be expected.)

Will you have to require your children to remain inside, behind locked doors, and away from friends for you to feel that they are safe?

Are there other options available to you, such as a school-age child care program at a school, community center, or church? If there are no existing programs, can you get together with other parents to organize one? Or can you hire a responsible teenager for part of every afternoon, or several times each week to take your children to the library, the park, or playground?

As you consider your children's ages, temperaments, common sense, and experience, and put that together with your assessment of the safety of your home and neighborhood, how comfortable do you feel about leaving the children alone?

If you are comfortable, can you test the situation before making a long-time arrangement? For example, can you leave the children for short periods while you visit a neighbor or go to the store? If you are uneasy or have doubts, try to arrange for supervision in your own home. Children should be able to feel that an adult will respond quickly and pleasantly when needed.

Being "home alone" will inevitably create some anxiety and stress for families. The only sure rule is that age is only one factor to be considered when making this decision.

For more information on how to keep your children safe when home alone, call your nearest county office of Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

Road To Recovery Drivers Needed

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Many cancer patients living in Lancaster County have no transportation to and from cancer treatments. From Amish friends and neighbors to people with no family around to help, these patients rely on the kindness of strangers to take them to and from their important treatments.

Road to Recovery, an American Cancer Society program, addresses this need with volunteer drivers from the community. Volunteers can spend a few hours a week to drive their fellow Lancaster residents to radiation, chemotherapy, and blood work, at no charge.

Volunteer drivers are needed now! You may not have the time to be a driver yourself; but you can help the American Cancer Society recruit volunteer drivers.

Even if you know of one person who may be interested in serving as a volunteer driver, it could make all the difference. Consider helping Road to Recovery in one or all of the following ways:

- Call the American Cancer Society for materials to create a display in your organization's lobby.
- Refer a friend who may consider being a driver.
- Consider volunteering as a driver yourself.

For more information, please call Michelle at the American Cancer Society at (717) 397-3744.

Susquehanna County Dairy Princess Kelly Diaz Continues Reign

HARFORD (Susquehanna Co.) — The Susquehanna County did not have any candidates for a new dairy princess. However, the County Dairy Promotion Committee recognized the enthusiasm the current Dairy Princess Kelly Diaz exhibited as she took part in many promotion throughout the previous year and ask Kelly to continue her reign. Kelly accepted the responsibility. Kelly is the daughter of Maurice and Gwenn Diaz and resides near Harford.

The county did not lack for interest in promoting the dairy industry when it came to young ladies wishing to participate as dairy maids and dairy ambassadors. During the upcoming year, Shana Mack, daughter of Dean and Jane Mack from Brooklyn will continue her position as a dairy ambassador. Shana lives on her families dairy farm and helps with chores in the barn and also shows dairy cattle as a member of the Born to Show 4-H Club. This will be Shana's second year as a dairy ambassador and has also served as a dairy maid. Abbey Puzo will also be continuing her second year as a dairy maid. Abbey is the daughter of Douglas and Mary Puzo of Montrose. Abbey enjoys spending time on her grandparents farm, Bill and Evie Goff, and working with her Jersey and her Red and White Holstein heifer. Abbey is a member of the Watrous Corners 4-H Club and will be showing animals in 4-H and at the Harford Fair.

Two other young ladies will be dairy ambassadors for the new promotion year. Amanda Miner, daughter of Patrick and Connie Miner of Meshoppen. Amanda is active in the DES 4-H Club and enjoys showing her dairy heifers. Amanda is also educating people about juvenile diabetes. Rebecca Jordan, daughter of Dale and Jeanne Jordan of Montrose, is looking forward to milk promotion activities in her area during her reign as an ambassador.

Dairy maids include Jenna Sprout and Alyssa Sprout, daughters of Preston and Valarie Sprout of Montrose. Madison Legg, daughter of Bruce and Eudonna Legg of Choconut became interested in serving as a dairy maid because her grandparents Edwin and Bernice Mead own a dairy farm near Montrose and her Dad owns and operates Legg's Dairy, a distributor of milk in the Susquehanna County area. Abbey Hewitt, daughter of William and Ginger Hewitt from Fairdale lives on her families dairy farm. Ashley Franklin, daughter of Dennis and Penny Franklin, Montrose, plans to fit dairy promotion between playing softball and helping out on her families dairy farm.

Dairy promotion will keep this Susquehanna County Dairy Princess Court busy.

As the girls in the dairy court were introduced, they each gave a short speech, "Why they wanted to be part of Dairy Promotion in Susquehanna County."

Guests at the dairy princess pageant learned that these girls do not spend all their time feeding and milking cows. Shana Mack performed a lovely ballet dance of her own choreography. Mariah Castorgiovanni shared her tap dancing ability. Abbey Puzo plays two piano pieces, and Rebecca Jordan a clarinet solo. Amanda Miner read two poems. Madison Legg presented an inspiring signing performance. Madison learned signing in school and continues to increase her knowledge about communicating with the deaf.

Mariah Castrogiovanni, Abbey Puzo, Shana Mack, Stacy Rezykowski and Kelly Diaz were all recognized for completing a year of dairy promotion. These girls all did a speech about their most memorable dairy promotion. Each girl received an incentive check and a toy cow complete with a dairy promotion sash. Abbey Puzo also received an award for the best scrapbook.

Kelly Diaz thanked members of the committee for their part in organizing promotions in the county and for planning the pageant. Peggy Empet and Kay Garner were recognized for the years of dedication they have given to the program. Evie Goff was introduced as the chairperson and Mary Puzo as the booking chairperson for the coming year. Other members of the committee include Lynelle Cleveland, Melinda Keeney, Lorraine Lauer, Connie Miner, Darlene Page and Becky Place.

On The 'Moove' For More Dairy Goodness

Sydney, 4, and 6-month-old twins Amelia Faith and Anna Grace are the children of Sam and Lori Bowen, Wytheville, Vir.

CHUNKY CHEESE SOUP

2 cups frozen hash browns
2 (14½-ounce) cans chicken broth
8-ounces frozen mixed vegetables
1 small onion, chopped
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 (10-ounce) cans cream of chicken soup (undiluted)
16-ounces Velveeta cheese
3 loafs frozen bread

Allow dough to thaw and cut each loaf in half. A four-cup Pyrex glass bowl works perfect for letting the bread rise, baking, and eating soup. If you do not have this size bowl, you can let rise and bake on a cookie sheet. After bread has risen and baked, cut the top off of each bowl and removes some of the center to make a bowl. The pieces that have been removed can be eaten with your soup.

Combine and bring to a boil in a large pot: hash browns, broth, vegetables, onion, salt, and pepper. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes. Stir in soup and return to a simmer. Add cheese that has been cubed into one-inch blocks, stirring until melted. Spoon soup into bread bowls and enjoy!

Yield approximately 6½ cups.

Soup and bread bowls reheat nicely in the microwave. Reheat separately, and pour soup into bowls.

Our family really enjoys this soup and the way it is served.

My husband Sam and myself have a 4-year-old daughter, Sydney, and 6-month old twin daughters, Anna Grace and Amelia Faith, who were born Dec. 1, 2000. We couldn't have asked for a better Christmas gift!

We live on a beef cattle farm in southwest Virginia and my husband and father-in-law farm together as well as work off the farm jobs.

I am a stay-at-home mother who loves every minute of it, even though it is very hard work, and I feel blessed that I have the opportunity to be with my children all the time.

Even though we don't live in the Pennsylvania area, we have always subrscribed to Lancaster Farming and look forward to each issue and hope to visit some of the places we read about.

Lori Bowen
Wytheville, VA

Tim and Cathy Blowers and sons are from a New York farm.

The Valentine children enjoy life on the family's Clearville farm.

Harry and Sue Becker and their four children live on a dairy farm in Ephrata.

SUE'S ICE CREAM

4 tablespoons Jell-O or instant pudding

Dissolve Jell-O in 1 cup boiling water or dissolve pudding in 1 cup whole milk. Put mixture in ice cream freezer. Add:

14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups heavy cream
2 cups sugar
3 cups whole milk or 2 cans evaporated milk

Mix together and pour into ice cream freezer with gelatin or pudding mixture. Add whole milk to line on ice cream freezer.

Process as usual using an electric or hand-cranked ice cream freezer. The electric version takes from 30-45 minutes. Freeze until firm. Makes 2-4 quarts.

I'm a farm wife and mother living on my husband's family farm where he and my father-in-law crop farm 450 acres. Being a "city kid" I never realized or fully appreciated how beautiful the country could be!

We butcher our own chicken and pork and put in a large garden that I use to put up plenty of canned and frozen goods for our growing family.

With husband Tim and three beautiful sons, Gregory, 4½; Ryan, 2½; and Ethan, 3 months. I have plenty of reasons to cook!

My love of cooking was kindled by a home economics class in high school and I'm still at it!

This recipe for homemade ice cream is a family favorite. It is one of my favorites also because it is easy and delicious and doesn't require raw eggs. I hope it'll become a favorite of the readers also.

EASY & DELICIOUS PASTA BAKE

1½ pounds ground beef
8-ounces large pasta shells, uncooked
1 can cheddar cheese soup
2 cups mozzarella cheese or pizza cheese (a blend of 3 cheeses is best)
26-ounces spaghetti sauce

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cook pasta according to package directions, but do not overcook; drain. (I sometimes add more pasta for a fuller meal).

Brown ground beef, drain. Place ground beef into 9x13-inch baking dish.

Add cheddar cheese soup to beef and mix well. Add pasta shells and spaghetti sauce, mix well. When adding sauce, pour in ½ jar and mix before adding more sauce. Do not make the meat and pasta mixture too soupy.

Top with cheese. Cook, uncovered, for 30 minutes or until cheese is melted and bubbly.

This is a family favorite of our and is great for parties. The children love it. It is very easy and quick to make. It can be made ahead of time, refrigerated, and placed in oven after a long day at work.

We live on farm in Clearville and own a small herd of beef cattle. Our son Hunter is 4½ and our daughter Emily is 15 months.

We also own a few turkeys, some ducks, 5 dogs, and a bunch of cats, and a donkey named Larry.

Hunter and Emily love all the animals and living on such a beautiful place. Hunter helps his daddy on the farm and has even driven a tractor with his dad.

EASY MACARONI AND CHEESE

3 tablespoons butter
2½ cups uncooked macaroni
½ teaspoon salt
½ pound mozzarella cheese, grated
½ pound sharp cheese, grated
5 cups milk

Melt butter in 9x13-inch baking dish. Pour in uncooked macaroni and stir. Stir in salt and cheese. Pour milk over all. Bake at 325 degrees for one hour. Do not stir while baking. Optional: Pour buttered bread crumbs on top and bake an additional 10 minutes or until lightly browned.

My husband and I and two daughters live near New Danville. My husband and his father own Cherry Hill Orchards so summer is a busy time.

I am an X-ray technologist, but currently a full-time mother. My daughters, Allison and Erin, are 4½ years and 5½ months old.

I thought this quick and easy recipe would be great for the dairy contest because it uses so many dairy products. Enjoy.

CHERRY SOUR CREAM COFFEE CAKE

½ cup butter, softened
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 can cherry pie filling

Cream butter, sugar, and eggs. Add sour cream and vanilla alternately with dry ingredients. Layer half of batter, cherry pie filling, and remaining batter in greased 9x13-inch greased baking pan. Top with the following crumb mixture:

¼ cup cold butter
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup flour
½ cup chopped walnuts

Combine sugar, cinnamon, and flour. Cut in butter to form crumbs. Add walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees for 40-50 minutes.

This cake can be served as a breakfast treat or as a dessert. Our family enjoys it anytime of the day. My boys love fruity desserts. My daughter prefers chocolate. My husband, Harry, and I have four children, Sheldon, 12; Trent, 10; Kara, 8; and Dustin, 2.

We live on a dairy farm in Ephrata. I subscribed to Lancaster Farming for a birthday present for Harry when we were first married. Section B was a pleasant surprise for me. Many of my favorite recipes come from these pages.

We are still living the good life in a beautiful rural area in northern Harford County, just 1½ miles below the Pennsylvania state line. Our youngest son, Sam and his wife, Donna, adopted four children from Russia. They are two boys, Cole and Dennis, 5 and 6 years old, and two girls, Sofia and Dasha, 7 and 10 years old. They already had three biological children, Chelsea, 11; Samantha, 8; and Christian, 6.

I traveled almost 12,000 miles in mid-September 2000 with Sam to pick up the children and bring them to the U.S. The children are doing very well, are being homeschooled, and have learned lots of English. They can drink lots of milk and use many dairy products every day.

We praise the Lord to live in America even though America is not problem free!

I'm 18 years old. I don't live on a farm, but my uncle across the road has a farm.

I come from a family of 8 children. I have three sisters and four brothers. My oldest sister is married and has a sweet little daughter, Deborah, 18 months old. So, I'm also an aunt.

I have a part-time cleaning job. I clean three different houses and enjoy it. Other times I'm at home helping my mom with all the everyday work. It seems no matter how hard you work, there's always something to do. We just never run out of work.

My dad is the owner of a steel shop, which is called Martin's Steel. My two brothers also work for him.

This is the kids last week of school. This summer my one brother will go work on a farm.

My youngest brother and two sisters will stay home and help out here at home. My parents are Irvin and Esther. The names and ages of the others in my family are Darlene married to Allen Z.; Eugene, 20; David, 16; John Aaron, 14; Lenard, 12; Mary Elizabeth, 9; and Ruth Elaine, 6.

½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons butter, cut into pieces
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract
2 eggs, beaten
⅓ cup chopped dates, prunes, apricots, raisins, or whatever you imagine

Add eggs and mix. Add dates and pistachios and mix until mixture is evenly moistened. Put the dough on the baking sheet. Form the dough into a log shape 3-4 inches wide and 12-14-inches long. Sprinkle with the remaining sugar. Bake 20-30 minutes, keep an eye on it until lightly brown. Take out of oven, set aside and let cool. Cut log into ¾-1-inch slices. Put slices back on baking sheet, side down. Bake for about five minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from oven, let cool, and enjoy. Makes 1-2 dozen.

Biscotti and Italian hosts are synonymous. I can't ever recall a time when in the company of an Italian that I wasn't offered a biscotti for breakfast, lunch, dessert, or snack time. No matter what the occasion or time of day, they're those crunchy cookie biscuits that make everything better.

My son's name is Chad and my daughters name is Rachel. Chad is 12 and Rachel is 10. I am too old.

We enjoy reading the Lancaster Farming. Although sometimes we don't receive our paper until Monday or Tuesday, we still enjoy it. Chad and Rachel help me with the cooking and baking. They really enjoy baking. We also have a yellow labrador retriever named Anna.

MILK AND HONEY LOAF

Eat this wholesome bread cooled, with lots of butter. Keeps a day or two, well wrapped.

1 cup graham flour
1 cup unbleached white flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup whole milk
½ cup dark honey, such as buckwheat

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Put the graham flour in a mixing bowl. Sift the white flour, baking powder, and salt over graham flour. Measure the milk in a 2 cup measure and incorporate the honey as a drizzle. Pour the milk and honey mixture into the flour and beat until well combined. Pour into greased 7x3-inch loaf pan and bake 40-50 minutes, until humped and well browned.

Milk and honey — nature's two perfect foods. Even though honey is my favorite of the two and I love honey bees more than cows, I still make sure I drink three big, tall glasses of milk a day. Milk has nine essential vitamins and nutrients, but honey has 22. Honey is also packed with carbohydrates for energy and antioxidents for health. With no fat, no cholesterol, and only 60 calories per tablespoon, honey is the absolute perfect food to eat all day, every day. While I'm traveling throughout the country this year, honey is the perfect fuel I need to keep me going. For more great honey recipes, check out www.honey.com. Give your honey a squeeze.

ANSWER — Rhoda Stauffer requested a recipe for Kosher dill pickles that had appeared on the Morton brand for Kosher salt. Thanks to Rosemary Van DeWeert, Geneseo, N.Y., who sent in a recipe she got from a Morton kosher salt box.

Kosher Dill Pickles

3 pounds pickling cucumbers
¾ cup coarse kosher salt
2 quarts water
3 cups distilled white vinegar
5 cups water
12 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons whole mixed pickling spice
6 sprigs fresh dill
6 small hot peppers

Wash cucumbers thoroughly. Slice ¾-inches thick, discard blossom ends. Place in large bowl. Dissolve coarse salt in 2-quarts water; pour over cucumbers. Cover, let stand 24 hours. Drain. In large kettle, combine vinegar and 5 cups water. Add garlic and pickling spice tied in cheesecloth bag. Bring to boiling. Meanwhile, place one sprig dill and one pepper in hot sterilized pint jar. Pack cucumbers in jars. Discard spice bag; pour hot liquid over cucumbers to within ½-inch from tops of jars. Close jars as manufacturer directs. Process 10 minutes in boiling water bath. Makes 6 pints.

ANSWER — Robert O'Leary, Clarks Summit, requested a recipe for Pepper Corn Soup or corn chowder. Thanks to Dorothy Stoms, Deerfield Street, N.J., for sending a recipe from "The Art of Indian Cooking."

Corn Chowder

½ pound salt meat (salt pork or jerkie)
1 onion, peeled, chopped
½ green pepper, seeded, washed, chopped
1 potato, peeled, cut up
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups corn kernels cut from cob
2½ cups whole milk or use potato water

Heat salt pork in pot slowly; add onion, green pepper, and raw potato and simmer slowly 15 minutes or so until potato is tender. Add seasonings and corn, stir while corn heats through (do not overcook). Stir in milk or water in which potato has cooked to a mush for the purpose) and butter. When steaming hot, sprinkle in a little chopped parsley or watercress and serve.

ANSWER — Sometimes Helen's baked cheesecake rises to the top of the springform pan then collapses in the center, resulting in a one-inch high rim around the perimeter of the pan. She asked what she is doing wrong. Thanks to Dorothy Stoms, N.J., for sending in the following pointers.

Tips For Cheesecake Success

• Stir the filling gently after adding the eggs and any remaining ingredients. Vigorous beating will incorporate too much air, which causes the cheesecake to puff up, then fall and crack.

• Test the cheesecake for doneness at the minimum baking time to avoid overbaking, which results in a dry texture and can cause the center to fall.

• Check the doneness by gently shaking the pan rather than inserting a knife. If a knife is inserted into the cheesecake, the hole may grow a large crack.

• Set a minute timer for the exact cooling time given in the recipe. When the timer rings, follow the recipe directions for loosening the crust of the cheesecake from the sides of the pan when the recipe specifies, the cheesecake may begin to pull away from the sides and crack.

Kids Korner

New foal "Misty's Morning Glory" will live with her mother, "Black Mist," at Chincoteague, Virginia's Pony Center this summer.

Another Star Is Born

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM — Another equine descendant has been added to the famous Chincoteague pony "Misty's" line.

Misty's Morning Glory, the great great granddaughter of Misty, and granddaughter of Misty II, was born May 7 at 1:30 a.m. to mother Black Mist.

"She's very unusually colored," said owner Kendy Allen. "We don't know for sure what color she will be. Right now she is three shades of brown — from dark brown to light buckskin — it depends on where you look at her. She's very prettily marked."

A Royal Lineage

"Glory is a breath of fresh air for us," said Allen. The foal's birth was a welcome event when, after 13 years with the family, Misty II died of cancer last fall. Also in the fall Black Mist's pregnancy tests returned as negative, another disappointment.

"She qualified for the state 4-H Show and competed in hunter classes," said Allen. "But she just seemed to keep putting on weight so we had her tested again."

This time, the result was positive and "Glory" was born several months later.

Allen and her husband, Keith, own five acres and rent additional acreage to house their herd of 20 Chincoteague ponies in Manheim. The late Marguerite Henry's widely-read 1947 book, "Misty of Chincoteague" propelled the breed and the Chincoteague, Virginia, island to fame.

During a vacation to Chincoteague in 1987 the Allens made the unplanned but fortunate purchase of Misty II and "discovered what a wonderful breed of horse they are."

Summer Plans

Allen, who is a librarian at a nearby school, combines her library work with horse work by taking children Kerra, 19, Katye, 15, and Kenneth, 12 to Chincoteague for the summer. Keith will stay on the family's farm for the season.

"We'll be down at the Chincoteague Pony Center all summer," said Allen. The family is in charge of the pony aspect of the business. The center, founded last year by an island resident, is a combination museum and horse center.

It includes a film, movie poster, selection of Marguerite Henry books, and stable for Misty's direct descendant which perform in nightly show for visitors. In addition the ponies provide riding lessons or just rides.

Kerra plans to work as a riding instructor. Glory is already at the center, where she will be "taking life easy and growing and getting halter work," according to Allen.

In addition the Allens own a farm in Chincoteague, Virginia.

/Pony Penning, Auction

According to Website information, two herds of wild horses make their home on Assateague Island, nearby to Chincoteague Island, separated by a fence at the Maryland-Virginia line.

Each year the Virginia herd is rounded up for the internationally-recognized pony penning and auction.

Penning began as a way for livestock owners to claim, brand, break and harness their loose herds.

In 1909, the last Wednesday and Thursday of July were set as the official dates for the yearly events. In 1925 the town authorized the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company to hold a carnival during Pony Penning to raise funds. That year over 15 colts were sold to benefit the fire company, and the carnival was a success.

Pony penning is still held in July. "Salt Water Cowboys" herd the horses across the narrowest part of Assateague Channel at low tide, after which they are examined by veterinarians.

After a resting period, they are herded through town to a corral at the carnival grounds where they stay until the next day's auction. The pony auction provides revenue for the fire company, and decreases the herd's numbrs, which must not exceed 150 horses for grazing permit purposes.

2 medium ripe mashed bananas
2 8-ounce boxes frozen strawberries, sliced, sweetened
Dash salt
½ pint sour cream
1½ cups boiling water

Use drained pineapple juice as part of the liquid in which to dissolve Jell-O. Stir until dissolved. Add partially thawed strawberries, bananas, and pineapples, and dash of salt.

Divide mixture in half and let set 30 minutes to jel. Spread one half with sour cream. Spoon remaining mixture on top.

Serve with whipped cream or ice cream as desired.

I'm just a retired person who, once a long time ago, lived on a farm in Pennsylvania.

Ramen Noodles Not The Same As Pasta

Although people often think of instant ramen noodles in the same vein as rice or pasta, it's really quite a different product. Instead of simply being a dried grain or noodle, instant ramen noodles are fried and cooled before being dried and packaged.

As a result, the Nutrition Facts information on the back of the package might yield a surprise: one package of instant ramen noodles can contain nearly 400 calories and 14 grams of fat. Admittedly, one package is billed as two servings, so if you do split your noodles with a friend, you can cut those fat and calorie counts in half.

Also, ramen's flavor packets need some consideration. Their salt content can be quite high, contributing greatly to a package's total sodium of 1,600 milligrams (or nearly 800 milligrams per serving).

Sodium's "Daily Value" — a reference point consumers can use to evaluate their daily intake of nutrients — is 2,400 milligrams. To be fair, most people get much more sodium, often about 4,000 milligrams a day, according to the 1988-91 National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey. But heavy ramen consumers likely get even more than that.

Compare all that with the nutrition information for spaghetti: one cup contains less than 100 calories, less than 1 gram of fat, and less than 150 grams of sodium.

However, comparing instant ramen noodles with spaghetti is sort of like comparing a cookie with a pizza crust. Hardly anyone eats plain pasta, and any topping you put on top of spaghetti will likely add fat, calories and other nutrients to your meal. Still, if you're accustomed to thinking of ramen simply as curly thin spaghetti strands, it's probably good to know that there's more to them than that.

To get a little more bang for your buck when making instant ramen noodles, try adding a few handfuls of fresh or frozen chopped broccoli, cauliflower, celery, carrots or other vegetables when you boil the noodles. They'll add nutrients and fiber to the dish, and add very few calories.

Michelle Walker Selected As York County Dairy Princess

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — In a program marked by sparkling tiaras and pastel floral bouquets, the York County's dairy industry crowned Michelle Walker as its dairy princess.

The 18-year-old daughter of Leroy and Brenda Walker, Thomasville, received her crown and banner from outgoing princess Heather Crowl as the finale of the annual county pageant, hosted May 26 at the 4-H Center.

Michelle, who was a former York County alternate dairy princess, is a June graduate of York County School of Technology. She was president of the school's honor society, attended the Governor's School for Health Care and is an alumni of the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership program.

"I'm interested in working with my own peer group," said Michelle of her promotion focus for the upcoming year. "A lot of people are timid about working with their peers; you play down the "beauty pageant" aspect of it and focus on nutrition."

Michelle has observed through her high school years a lack of nutrition information and healthy eating habits of pregnant teens. Her concern for that issue is what pointed her toward a teen nutrition emphasis in her dairy princess promotion goals.

Along with meeting a busy June Dairy Month schedule of events, Michelle will spend two weeks this summer touring France, Spain, and Morocco, as part of the Hugh O'Brian Leadership alumni group.

Michelle donned an outfit of "cow spots" black and white, complete with matching suitcase, to perform her promotional skit. Portraying a salesman for dairy products; she whipped appropriate dairy items from her "sample case" while offering health information about milk's nutritional benefits for all ages.

Quizzed by emcee Linda Spahr about what the word "dairy" meant to her, Michelle responded with a checklist of items, including the importance of milk in diets, cows which product it, the safeness of the supply of dairy foods, and a reminder to always look for the "Real" seal.

"The greatest scientists in the world have never figured out how to do what a cow does," Michelle said in finalizing her description of the word "dairy." "And that's how to take grass and turn it into milk."

In response to a "fishbowl" question on what have been the biggest changes in farming in 50 years, Michelle pinpointed such improvements as milk testing and safety, improved equipment, and greater emphasis on cow care and comfort.

Named dairy ambassadors for York County to assist princess Michelle are April Daugherty, 17, daughter of Philip and Terry Daugherty, York, and Raechel Kilgore, 16, daughter of Pam and Doug Kilgore, Airville. Both are 4-H dairy club members and own animals in their families' dairy herds which they exhibit.

April Daugherty's promotional speech was in the form of a response to the comment she has heard made by some people that they do not need to eat dairy products. She detailed how milk is a valuable nutrition boost for people of all ages, from infants to the elderly.

Quizzed by Spahr as to what one dairy product she would promote, if limited to only one, April promptly replied that it would be ice cream. In addition to being her favorite dairy food, April quickly reminded the audience that not only is ice cream good, but it provides a healthy amount of calcium as well.

Ambassador candidates are required to present a promotional skit, and April donned a pair of pajamas, complete with cow bedroom slippers and a cow stuffed animal accessories. She then offered bedtime prayers of thanks for all the healthy and delicious dairy products available.

Ambassador Raechel Kilgore put a different twist on her promotional skit, with a political campaign complete with "Hail To The Chief" playing in the background for candidate Molly "W" Moo. Candidate Moo, of course, stood for good health and good nutrition, as found in dairy products.

For her speech presentation, Raechel asked the audience to consider what the world would be like without milk. She noted that low calcium intake has been identified by health professionals as a serious nutritional problem in this country. Outlining some of the chronic health problems related to low calcium intake, Raechel cited the relationship between lack of calcium and diseases like osteoporosis, breast cancer, colon cancer, and teeth and gum deficiencies.

"If I were a cow, why would I want you promoting my product for me?" was Raechel's random question. She answered that she has lots of energy to turn toward promoting and explaining to the public the nutrients and benefits provided by milk and dairy products.

Dairy Miss Amanda Hoover, 13, is the daughter of dairy goat herd owners Paul and Rose Hoover, East Prospect. The Eastern York seventh grader presented a dairy promotion poster-talk. In her "From Cow To Carton" presentation, Amanda combined text and graphics to depict how a cow's diet is the equivalent of 480 hamburgers per day for a person. She explained that the average cow daily produces enough milk to give 30 children each their recommended three glasses per day.

Original dairy-oriented poems are the required presentation for dairy miss and little miss candidates. Amy Baumgardner, 10, wrote and recited verses about her dairy calf, "Mug." Her sister Katherine "Katie" Baumgardner, 6, recited her poem about milk, cheese and ice cream. These young ladies are the daughters of dairy farmers Lori and Dan Baumgardner, Dillsburg.

"Honeycomb," her 4-H calf, was the subject of the poem recited by 9-year-old Carlyn Crowl. Carlyn is the daughter of Gary and Melanie Crowl, Delta, and the granddaughter of dairy farmers Ellis and Joyce Crowl.

Little Miss Amber Thoman, 7, presented a poem about cows. Amber is the daughter of Gail and Gary Thoman, Dallastown.

Learning to "go with the flow" was part of the year-long learning experience reviewed in her farewell by outgoing princess Heather Crowl. Heather focused her major dairy educational promotions toward elementary schools, visiting with over 3,000 young students during her year-long reign. She challenged new Princess Michelle Walker to "have the best year of your life" and charged the audience with making sure that Michelle had every opportunity to participate in dairy organization events.

Organizations interested in having York County Dairy Princess Michelle Walker speak to or participate in their meetings should contact booking Chairperson Lori Baumgardner, 237 W. Barrens Church Road, Dillsburg, PA 17019, or phone (717) 432-3169.

York County Dairy Princess Michelle Walker's promotion supporters include her parents, Brenda and Leroy Walker.

Budgeting Tips For Brides And Grooms

You are engaged to be married, so it's time to not only plan your wedding, but create a new budget and find a new home together. People often spend thousands of dollars on their weddings; with some thrifty planning, you can help prevent breaking the bank so that you have money left over for the future.

First, estimate how many guests you want to invite. Write out a list and try to keep the number of guests even between the bride and groom. You may want to cut the list by eliminating business associates, escorts for unmarried guests and relatives who live far away.

Buy a wedding dress off the rack from a secondhand store or borrow one from a friend or relative. When shopping, take a friend with you to help keep things in perspective.

Make your honeymoon plans early to get discounted rates on airfare and accommodations. Forgo the limousine, have the ceremony flowers transferred to the reception, have a relative take photographs and videos, and serve a buffet-style dinner. Or consider skipping the big wedding altogether and getting a combined marriage/honeymoon package.

After you've made all the wedding plans, it's time to create a marital budget. Budget math is simple: The amount of money going out must always be less than or equal to the amount of money coming in.

First, write down all your current living expenses — rent payment, utilities, transportation and so on. Next, start tracking where the rest of your money goes by keeping daily documentation of all purchases with receipts for everything you buy — even if it's as small as a cup of coffee.

Also note whether you pay cash, use a credit card or write a check. At the end of the month, fill out an expense record for all of your purchases. For items you pay for once or twice a year, divide the payment by the number of months to get the monthly amount.

Now that you know what you can afford, combine the total with that of your future spouse and figure out how much you can afford for your apartment together.

You should spend no more than 25 percent of your monthly gross income on rent. If you each earn $30,000 a year, or $2,500 per month, then you each should not spend more than $625 per month — a combined total of $1,250 — for rent.

When choosing a place to live, consider how close it is to where you work, whether the neighborhood is safe and how close it is to good schools, stores, banks, post offices and public transportation.

Inspect the apartment before you sign your lease. Keep in mind that laws governing landlord/tenant requirements and relationships vary from state to state.

Crownvetch Industry Is As Perennial As Plant Itself

GAIL STROCK

PINE GROVE MILLS (Centre Co) — Dr Fred Grau Sr discov ered a pretty lavender flowered cover plant along a shale pit near Virginville, Berks County, in 1935

Little did he know that it would become one of the most sought-after ground covers for the highway department in the 60s and a sole source of business income for his son one of only three or four major crownvetch producers in the coun try

By discovering crownvetch and developing the production and mar keting of the crop, Fred became the founder of the crownvetch industry

"He didn't know what it was, said Fred Grau Jr "He was an ex tension agronomist in turf at Penn State in 1935 He brought some back to Penn State and identified it He immediately saw the erosion control use for it

"In the late '40s and early '50s Penn State picked up on the idea of using it My father, Penn State, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Highways together conducted three years of research on crownvetch in the late '40s Then they released it as Penngift Crown

Seeleys' Milky Way Farm Reaps Benefits Of Grazing

CAROLYNN MOYER
Bradford Co Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co) — For the Seeley family of Milky Way Farm in Troy the call of springtime is getting stronger and stronger every day

It not only signals the start of a new growing season but a shift in focus for their entire operation

We will rotate cows by mid April even though there is no grass said Kim Seeley, who has seen his farming focus change dra matically over the years The reason we do that is to get the ani mals out of the barn I think it s im portant to start grazing early just for our mentality The cows are excited, too They get spring fever just like we do '

Seeley s grandparents purchased the farm in 1928 In 1962 Kim s parents Lewis and Marie, expanded the operation by building a restau rant and jugging operation Their goal at that time was to earn enough money to put their four children through college which they did Kim and his wife Ann along with their two sons — Shon, 18 and Dane 8 — are an integral part of the operation

For many years the Seeleys ran a conventional dairy along with their jugging operation In fact they hold the claim to having the oldest free stall barn in Bradford County After a barn fire the Seeleys decided to move all the animals to a central lo cation with the milking animals in total confinement

We built a brand new barn in 1976 because of a barn fire For eight years we were in total confine

Whole milk chocolate milk is one of the Milky Way's successes. Kim Seeley says that the whole milk and better ingredients set their product apart from the rest. The Seeleys have been operating a jugging plant since 1962.

Lebanon County Royalty Vow To Milk Opportunity For All It's Worth

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — "This is a great opportunity," said Amy Moyer of her coronation as Lebanon County dairy princess. "I plan to milk it for all it's worth."

Hard work and commitment are qualities Amy exemplifies.

The 18-year-old daughter of Martin and Missy Moyer arises between 3:30 a.m. - 4 a.m. each day to milk cows on the family farm.

This week Amy is finishing up her senior year at Conrad Weiser High School. She chooses to work full time on the family's Womelsdorf farm rather than head off to college or seek an off-farm job.

Always a strong supporter of the dairy industry, Amy did not expect to become dairy princess. She said, "I thought I didn't have time. There was too much work on the farm, and my parents were depending on me."

But after some prodding by an uncle, and with her parents' approval, Amy decided to plunge wholeheartedly into dairy promotion.

She believes she and her team — made up of three dairy maids and one little miss — will "milk it for all its worth."

This is the second-year Jessica is filling the dairy maid position. The 14-year-old daughter of Dennis and Patricia Bross, Myerstown. said, "Last year was a great experience for me and I would like to see and meet even more people this year."

Also serving as dairy maids are 15-year-olds Chanelle Horst, daughter of Kirby and Sheryl Horst, Newmanstown, and Janelle Zimmerman, daughter of Calvin and Thelma Zimmerman, Lebanon.

All three dairy maids are from dairy farm families and own some of the cattle on their families' dairy herds.

Lil'l Miss Dairy Princess Louise Krall is the 7-year-old daughter of Tom and Shirley Krall, Lebanon.

Although Amy was the only contestant for the dairy princess crown, she needed to work just as hard to attain it. She prepared a skit and a speech for the event and needed to answer an impromptu question.

Wearing a cow costume, Amy portrayed Bessie the Cow, and promised the farmer to take care of him for taking care of her. Taking care of cows means cleaning equipment, barn, and milkhouse. Bessie, in response, provides high-quality milk, pure white and free of herbicides and pesticides.

If fly control is lax, Bessie is sure to give a swat with her tail that results in the farmer only being able to see out of one eye.

In her speech, Amy explained the meaning of the Real Seal, which assures everyone that the product is made with high quality milk. Her topic was chosen when she discovered that her English teacher did not know what the Real Seal referred to. After that discovery, Amy questioned 52 people and found that only 22 people out of 52 knew about the Real Seal.

Amy explained that the Real Seal logo was designed in 1976 in California to help customers determine at a glance whether or not food items are made with imitation or real dairy products.

In promotional events, Amy is eager to educate consumers about the importance of looking for the Real Seal.

Although the royalty team is deeply immersed in dairying, they also have many other commitments.

Amy is president of her school's FFA chapter. She is active in her church's youth and Bible study groups, in the 4-H dairy club, and competes in dairy judging. She especially enjoys fitting and showing cows. At school, Amy was a teaching laboratory assistant for the animal lab in the ag department.

Jessica is a ninth grader at New Covenant Christian School, where she writes for the school newspaper. Jessica is a member of the NorLebCo 4-H Dairy Club and the Extra Special Puppy Club. For the second summer in a row, Jessica will participate in a youth work camp in the Dominican Republic. She said, "We help provide homes and food to third-world countries."

Chanelle is a ninth grader at Eastern Lebanon High School, where she participates in field hockey, track, chorus, YFCA, and the school musical. She is active in two 4-H clubs, Junior Holstein Club, dairy judging, and dairy bowl. At church, Chanelle sings in the youth and senior choruses, plays piano, and participates in youth group.

Janelle is an eighth grader at Cedar Crest High School, where she is a member of the yearbook staff. Janelle is active in her church youth group, 4-H, dairy judging, Dairy Bowl, and plays the piano.

"I think it's fun to live on a farm. It teaches responsibility. If I don't feed my calf, it will die. I love to get cows ready to show," Janelle said. "My friends envy me, because they say it sounds like so much fun."

The youngest member of the promotion team is only seven, but she already has experience with showing friends and school groups around her family farm, which is a site for the Ag in the Classroom program. During the program, Louise, nicknamed Weezy, presented a skit and led a cheer on the importance of drinking milk every day.

The pageant program also included skits and a game show by outgoing royalty: Dairy Princess Sarah Krall, Alternate Amanda Heffelfinger, and Dairy Maid Jessica Bross.

Called "The Weakest Cow," The game mimicked television game show "The Weakest Link." Five contestants were selected from the audience and asked cow-related questions, which ranged from how many glasses of milk does a cow produce in one day to how many pounds of spit does a cow produce in a day. The audience voted off a member after each round of questioning. The winner was Amanda Martin, a former Lebanon County dairy princess.

Another contest required that participants submit a photo of themselves or a group sporting milk moustaches. Eighteen photos were displayed for the audience to cast a vote for their favorite choice. Jarod Zimmerman submitted the winning entry of himself and friends with milk moustaches. Jarod won $25 and a free milk promotional item of his choice.

Shrimp is full of cholesterol. But the real cholesterol danger lurks in the slyly packaged "cholesterol-free" cookie. You see, shrimp contains very little of the fat that makes that cookie taste so good. And it's the saturated fat in food, not the cholesterol, that has the greatest effect on your cholesterol level.

No wonder people are confused. Here's your guide to understanding what it all means, because what is clear is the link between high cholesterol in your blood and heart disease. You'll find out whether you need a cholesterol test and what "good" cholesterol is, along with quick tips for creating a heart-healthy diet. What you won't find is a recipe for those cookies.

Cholesterol, a white, waxy fat found naturally in your body, is used to build cell walls and make certain hormones. Too much of it, though, can clog your arteries and eventually choke off the supply of blood to the heart, which is the reason high cholesterol is a leading risk factor for heart disease.

Other factors that put you at risk include high blood pressure, smoking, a family history of premature heart disease, physical inactivity, diabetes, and obesity.

Everyone ages 20 and older, according to the National Cholesterol Education Program, should be tested at least once every five years. The test measures the total amount of cholesterol in your blood: The HDL or "good" cholesterol, which cleanses arteries: plus the LDL or "bad" cholesterol, which build up and clogs arteries. Desirable levels for total cholesterol below 200, LDL - below 130, and HDL above 60.

Following a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet can usually reduce your blood cholesterol by about 10 to 15 percent, thus lowering your risk of heart disease by 20 to 30 percent. Reduce saturated fat, which raises the level of harmful LDL cholesterol in your blood (butter, whole milk, cheese, ice cream, red meat, palm oil, palm kernel oil, coconut oil, hydrogenated soybean and cottonseed oils).

Limit meat products high in fat (hamburger, bacon, sausage).

Read labels carefully and beware of foods that contain large amounts of hydrogenated vegetable oils, cocoa butter, coconut and palm oils, beef fat, and lard.

Remove the skin from poultry, trim the fat around meat, and use lean beef, pork, or veal.

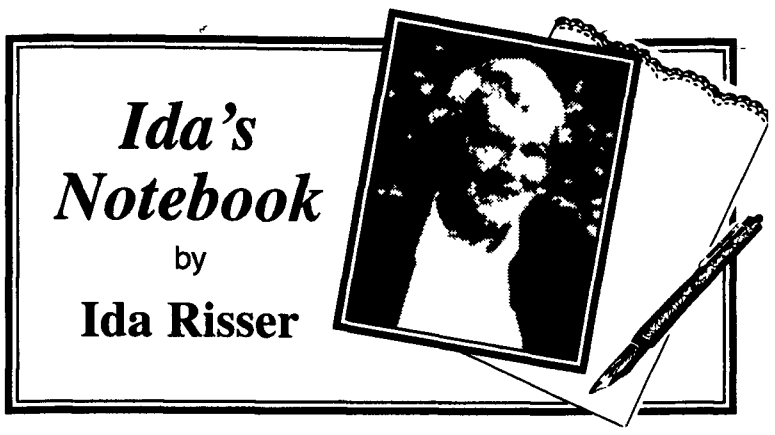
Prepare one meatless meal a week.

Reduce cholesterol eggs, meat, butter, and whole milk.

Cook with egg whites instead of whole eggs.

Avoid commercially prepared cookies, cakes, and pies.

Learn to do without organ meats (liver, brains, kidney).



The other day I spent eight hours riding in a car. It isn't something that I enjoy, as I realize the dangers on the highway. My husband spent several days in the mountains at his camper planting walnut trees. He digs up small trees and then transports them to other places.

I went along with my son's family to Tioga County, expecting to stay overnight. But, my husband was ready to come home and so after eating lunch, I got in another car and came back to Lancaster County in time to pick asparagus.

This year, I've given away many bouquets of Iris. I have three beds of blue, white, yellow, bronze and combinations of the above. They are rather fragile flowers and difficult to transport in a car. They only bloom in the spring, but I must keep them weed-free all year, which is a real challenge.

We visited an antebellum white-columned house in Roswell, Ga. last month. Bulloch Hall was the home of President Theodore Roosevelt's mother. Her other son was the father of Eleanor Roosevelt, who often visited this house and later married Franklin Roosevelt, a distant cousin. It has 11 fireplaces and a lofty center entrance hall. There were slave quarters nearby.

A very distant cousin of mine, David Shreiner, is headmaster of Shreiner Academy in Marietta, Ga. He invited us and our two children to visit his private school with 300 students and 60 faculty members. They also have an 80-acre summer camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Laurel Lake and a forest is where they study ecology and nature. David intends to write a book on Shreiner genealogy if he ever finds the time to collect all of his information.

FFA Discover the Power

Cedar Crest FFA Participates In Land Judging Contest

The Cedar Crest FFA participated recently in the Lebanon County Land Judging Contest held at Leon and Trudy Seyfert's farm.

Members had to identify land characteristics such as: soil texture, stoniness, slope and drainage. They also were required to identify the best uses of the land, determine what conservation practices should be used and identify factors that limit the use of the land.

Tim Emenheiser served as a judge for the event. Refreshments were provided by the Natural Resources Conservation Services.

The top 10 placings in order were as follows: Joel Krall, Erik Rheinheimer, Chet Brubaker, Jeremy Balsbaugh, John Watkins, Amanda Heffelfinger, Kyle Seyfert, Sarah Krall, Beth Kreider, and Daniel Eberly. All of these members were from Cedar Crest.

Other participating members from Cedar Crest were: Joel Heinaman, Deb Schaefer, Matt Balmer, Travis Krall, Mary Rossi, Samatha Shepler, Heather Hawkins, Dan George, Tara Miller, Carl Eisenhauer, Anthony Roof, Kris Keller, Amber Frank, Sarah Tribioli, Michelle Zimmmerman, John Russo, and Bridget Gingrich.

Cedar Crest FFA Competes In Regional Speaking Career Development Events

At the FFA Regional Speaking Career Development events conducted recently at the MillCreek Lutheran Church, FFA members from Cedar Crest participated in Parliamentary Procedure, Conservation Speaking, Senior Prepared Speaking, and the Extemporaneous Speaking contests.

Speaking contests require the participants to write a speech on an agricultural related topic. It must be of appropriate length: six to eight minutes for Senior Prepared Speaking and Conservation Speaking, and four to six minutes for Extemporaneous Speaking.

The Senior Prepared and Conservation Speaking contestants must answer up to five minutes of questions from the judges.

The Parliamentary Procedure teams must put on a 20 minute mock meeting correctly demonstrating many Parliamentary abilities.

The Parliamentary Procedure team members at the contest included: Jeremy Balsbaugh, Travis Krall, Matt Balmer, Samatha Shepler, Carl Eisenhauer, Deb Schaefer, Kyle Seyfert, and Tara Miller. The team placed third.

Cedar Crest results in the other regional contests were Joel Krall fourth, Sarah Krall sixth in the Senior Prepared Speaking contest. Beth Kreider first, Heather Hawkins third, and Amber Frank fifth, in the Conservation Speaking contest.

Chet Brubaker placed second, and Jeremy Balsbaugh placed seventh in the Extemporaneous Speaking contest.

Chet Brubaker, Beth Kreider and Heather Hawkins will advance and compete at Penn State University for the state competition on June 12-14.

Meats Judging Teaches Variety Of Life Skills

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — Meat retailing sections of modern supermarkets often stretch the length of a store, filled with a variety of cuts almost beyond imagination.

But, how many consumers shopping there really know much detailed information about the cuts of meat they study, perhaps perplexed and puzzled, as they ponder what to fix for dinner?

Take a veteran of the 4-H meats judging program by that retail meat counter and they can explain not only what a particular cut of meat is called, but what primal part of which species of meat animal it came from, and the most tasty, moist and flavorful way to cook it.

Chip Godfrey, a meats judging coach, quizzes Hope Long on a pork cut during a practice session.

"There are different names for the same cut of meat," affirms Russell Wilson, New Freedom, a member of last year's York junior meats judging team. And, while Wilson was always familiar with easily-recognized items like hamburger, sausage, and bacon, his meats knowledge now far surpasses that of the average retail meat customer.

Wilson, and his cousin Jeremy, both 14, are two of the dozen or so 4-H members practicing weekly since March in preparation for meats judging team competition, held at the Penn State meats lamb during the annual 4-H State Days in late July. Both Wilson cousins had extensive backgrounds in breeding and exhibiting hogs on the hoof from their families' hog production business, then voluntarily opted to devote hours and hours of personal time studying the retail side of the livestock industry.

Meats judging 4-H teams in York County have established a reputation over the years as keen competitors, honed by frequent practice led by knowledgeable, dedicated coaches. While friends may be relaxing or vacationing, members voluntarily shiver in lockers hanging full of raw carcasses of meat, eyeball large butchered sections to determine the species origin of primal — or large section — cuts and study how each particular cut of meat is best prepared for serving.

Last year's York winning state junior team included Russell and Jeremy Wilson, Hope Long, Airville, and Eric Bankert, Red Lion.

Payback for their hours of study and practice are often personal awards, trips, and recognition as meats judges, plus a lifetime of knowledge to make them savvy meat consumers and better cooks. For some, the experience has even offered career options. State winning judging team members represent Pennsylvania at the annual national 4-H competition.

One evening per week during their practice season, 4-H meats judging members gather at Godfrey Meats near Loganville, where owner Lee "Chip" Godfrey coaches them with his wealth of meats experience from hoof to hamburger. Teams of years past honed their skills at the same long-time family butcher business under the guidance of former owners Stanley and Mahlon Godfrey.

In addition to Chip Godfrey, coaches — all former 4-H meats judges themselves — include sisters Sandy Eisenhour Sweitzer and Sue Eisenhour Mayle, Giant Foods Meat Manager Scott Schell, Butcher and Meat Specialist Mike Bankert, who coaches the lamb practices. Extension 4-H Specialist Linda Spahr, who is usually on hand to lend her own expertise as a former winning team member, notes that each coach specializes somewhat in a particular phase of meats evaluation skills.

"In competition, they have to identify the species, the primal cut, retail name of the cut, and cooking method of 30 different items," explains Chip Godfrey. Garbed in the requisite professional long white coats and sanitary hair coverings, members are instructed from the shop's hanging carcasses, as well as large sections into which the full carcasses are first cut down known as "primal" cuts. They also study retail cuts as sold in supermarkets and the shop's retail display case.

Members spend many hours practicing for the verbal portion of the competition. After placing classes of hanging carcasses, judges must present their oral reasoning for the placing and comparisons of the classes, being careful to use correct meats industry terminology. So in addition to learning to evaluate meats and learn cooking techniques, 4-H judges become more proficient at public speaking.

"We start practices with one particular kind of meat; for instance, first we focused on pork, then we move on to beef," adds Godfrey. Lamb and specialty meats also get special study sessions.

In a preliminary test of their skills, area teams usually compete at the southeastern regional meats judging event, generally held a few weeks ahead of State Days.

"Meats judging is not an easy thing to do," says Linda Spahr, noting that team members must be familiar with some 130 retail cuts of meat, their origins and cooking methods. Of those 130 different retail cuts, Spahr explains the breakdown of 18 lamb cuts, 39 pork cuts, 54 of beef, eight various items such as sausage, ground beef or stew cubes and 16 items of what are known as "variety" meats, like liver, heart and tongue.

Contest format requires the ability to evaluate each of 30 selected meat items from that large range of possibilities, judging each on five different reference points, all in a mere 15 minutes, while recording it on a printed judging sheet. In addition to two or three identification classes and hanging carcass classes, teams judge wholesale and retail cut classes.

Spahr is quick to offer praise for the dedication of both team members and coaches, attributing the county's long run of 4-H meats judging accomplishments to all their volunteer time given.

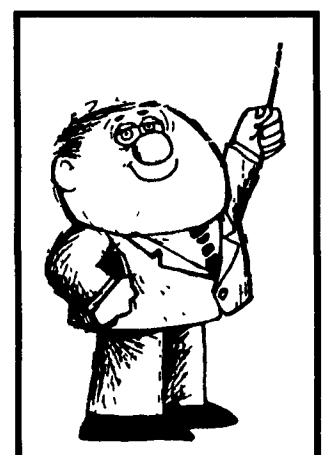
"Chip is exceptional; he lets us use the shop and tromp through his coolers to practice," says Spahr. "In some counties, the teams have to practice from videos and slides."

"The members of the teams develop a real camaraderie from the time they practice together," she adds. "That makes it possible for them to compete not just as individuals, but as a team. And it's nice to see them excited about doing this."

Individuals interested in more information on the 4-H meats judging program, or other 4-H programs and events, may contact Linda Spahr at the York County Agriculture Extension Office at (717) 840-7408.

While their peers are "hanging out" at other interests, 4-H meats judging teammates practice their skills in a chilly locker evaluating hanging carcasses.

Cousins Russell Wilson, left, and Jeremy Wilson view meats judging as not only a 4-H project activity, but as a way to scout out career possibilities while educating themselves as better consumers.



A lesson well learned...

4-H'ers Meet Legislators, See Government At Work During Capitol Days

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —More than 100 4-H members from across the commonwealth spent two days in Harrisburg recently meeting with their hometown legislators, visiting government departments and agencies, and touring the capitol complex.

As a part of their citizenship training in the Penn State Cooperative Extension 4-H Program, the 4-H'ers took part in the annual Pennsylvania State 4-H Capitol Days April 23-24. This program was begun in 1966 to provide a close-up look at how government works.

The first day was spent visiting the departments of agriculture, transportation, education, and commerce. The students took part in a simulated workshop where they wrote grant proposals for up to $100,000 and created a budget for one of the agencies. Their proposals were presented to a panel for discussion.

A breakfast with their legislators launched the second day of learning how state government works. Marilyn Corbin, state extension program leader for children, youth and families, addressed the group on their responsibilities as citizens. Following the breakfast, they toured the capitol and visited the legislators' offices.

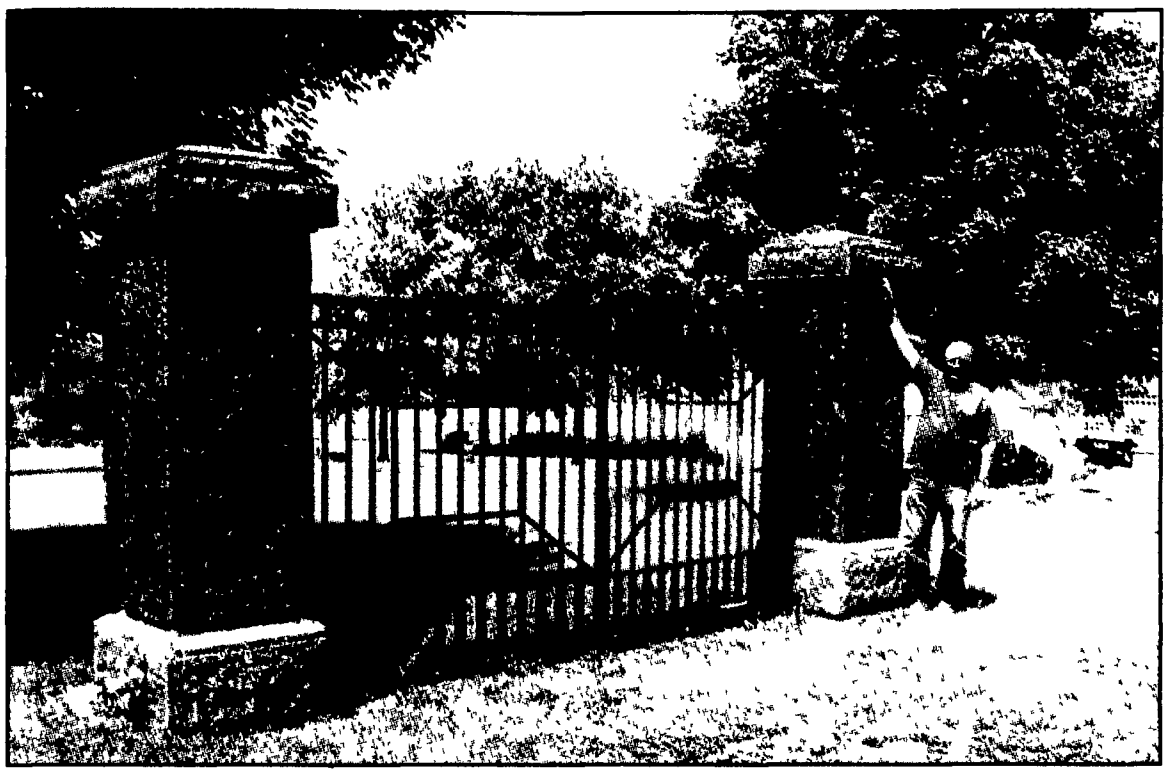
Antiques Center



This rare pair of red sandstone pillars with iron gates were originally part of the Alden Mansion in Cornwall and had been designed by Sanford White, renowned for his original designs of the Madison Square Gardens and many other historical gardens.

Ray Burkholder sits on a stone bench he devised from a stone that had been part of a staircase entrance.

Solid Investment Carved In Stone

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — For years, Ray Burkholder collected a variety of antiques but about 30 years ago, he decided to concentrate on amassing stone troughs, grist mill stones, and an assortment of other hand-carved stone items.

His reasons for switching priorities from antique china dishes to stone were three-fold.

"I liked it. It was something the kids couldn't spoil. And thieves couldn't carry it away," Burkholder said.

At first, Burkholder artfully displayed his collection on the acres of manicured grounds on his property. Eventually he amassed so many pieces that he stacked them behind a building on his farm.

He had no idea how many pieces he had, but whenever he saw something he liked, he bought it.

"I figured it could be my retirement fund. That I'd sell the stuff when I'm older. Now I ask myself, 'Am I older? How much older must I be before I'm older?"

Burkholder answers philosophically, "I guess I'm older because I'm gonna sell it."

When investing in any type of antiques, Burkholder believes the most basic tenet is to ask oneself, do I like it?

"I bought what I liked, not necessarily what I thought would bring the most return," Burkholder said.

He had confidence that hand-carved stone items would become more and more valuable and could serve as a retirement fund for him because the pieces have a story to tell.

Those old grindstones are reminiscent of bygone days when grain was ground into flour by the hefty stones that come in many different sizes. Water troughs, varying in lengths from three to 12 feet, were used to hold water and feed for cattle and other livestock.

At one time, the stone pieces were commonplace on farms. That changed when dairy farms were updated. Many farmers eager to modernize their operation saw the stone troughs as outdated relics. Too heavy to move, they smashed the stone troughs and buried the pieces.

Their nearsightness cost them. Today, troughs are selling between $800-$3,000.

Grindstones, too, have disappeared. As feedmills closed their doors, the grindstones were swooped up by collectors and homeowners who placed one or two in their gardens for decoration. Burkholder bought hundreds of those.

Although few of Burkholders' collection is dated, he believes most pieces are from the same era as a four-foot trough that has an 1860 date carved into it.

The troughs were standard pieces found on farms before the 20th century. Burkholder believes that probably itinerant stone carvers traveled to the farms and carved troughs and stone steps in whatever sizes the farm owners wanted. Some of the pieces are so roughly carved that they were perhaps fashioned by the farmer himself.

"I thought I was going to sandblast these pieces and clean them up before selling," Burkholder said. "But I soon found out otherwise. People want them looking old. When I was showing one of the pieces to a collector, I knocked some of the moss off so that he could see it better. He was horrified, and asked me, 'Why did you do that?'"

Burkholder points to the 1860 date carved into this water trough. Water troughs, varying in lengths from three to 12 feet, were used to hold water and feed for cattle and other livestock.

Burkholder shook his head, amazed that in his lifetime the preferences of people change. They no longer want pieces in pristine condition, but pieces that are weathered and moss-covered that reveal longevity.

"I'm only selling perfect pieces, and I'll keep anything cracked," Burkholder said. "Although it seems that people buy 'em even if they are cracked and broken. I was at a sale last fall where a trough with a crack sold for $2,500."

During the past years, it seemed a natural progression for Burkholder to expand his collection to include cast iron urns and iron gates.

On his property, he has a rare pair of red sandstone pillars with iron gates. He said the pillars and gates came from the Alden Mansion in Cornwall and had been designed by Sanford White. White is renowned for his original designs of the Madison Square Gardens and many other historical gardens.

"I had a fellow beg me to sell the pillars and gates to him a couple of years ago. But I said, 'even if you gave me $100,000, where could I find another perfect pair of pillars with gates?' You don't see them for sale anymore."

He also has another pair of red sandstone pillars topped with ball-shaped figures. These came from the Daisy Grubb mansion, now known as the Renaissance Winery, Manheim.

Arched stones used to cap stone fences most often seen around graveyards and cornerstones to houses also make up part of Burkholder's collection. He has hundreds of massive flat stones originally used for steps and walkways. Today many people use one step to make a garden bench.

The architectural auction is scheduled for June 16 at 11 a.m on Burkholder's farm, 758 W. Newport Rd., Lititz. For more information, call Burkholder at (717) 665-6848.

Old Cast-Iron Garden Furniture, Accessories Costly

Nothing adds charm faster to a garden than a piece of antique cast-iron furniture, urn or sculpture. If they are documented 19th century Victorian, they can be pricey. If they are in the Gothic style, you could pay over $4,000 for a matching bench and two chairs. A rustic style bench could cost $2,000. At those prices, you might want to put inside to save the finish. Many collectors do just that using a single piece to make a "statement" in an entry hall or anywhere. Cast-iron sculptures of deer, dogs and eagles run in the thousands of dollars.

Clues: The problem is that some of the more common pattern furniture continues to be reproduced and often artificially aged old patterns for all types of pieces still exist. Reproductions won't have sharply defined patterns. Rust on artificially aged reproductions will be orange.

Most of the late 19th century cast-iron pieces have makers marks. Before they began making cast-iron furniture, they had made everything from gates to stoves. Some names to look for are Chase Brothers and Company, who specialized in Gothic styles; Janes Kirtland & Company of New York and W.T. Westervelt of New York.

The general interest in using cast-iron decoratively began with the London Crystal Palace Exhibitions in 1851. It was the first time cast-iron was used with glass, forming the structure of the Crystal Palace. It was used earlier, in the 1840s by English garden designers. It was an American garden designer, Andrew Jackson Dowing, who in the 1840s felt gardens should be considered outdoor rooms, with furniture and accessories.

From the 1850s on, cast-iron furnishings followed the current decorative fashion. Some of the design influences were Gothic, as well as the rustic look. When they can find them, today's collectors search for the 1870s naturalism motifs. Branches, leaves and ferns formed furniture and accessory patterns. A late 19th century catalog shows Gothic-style birdhouses, with rococo trim.

Antique Detective

By the 1870s, the "new look" was an elegant and elaborate combination of Renaissance revival and rococo revival styles. It consisted of three floral panels forming the back, each with central floral medallions. Often the seats were edged with a skirt similar to the fringe used on Moorish furniture.

Some favorite Victorian garden accessories were massive fountains, and large animal statues, along with allegorical figures of Goddesses.

At the 1876 American Centennial Exhibition, the public was introduced to fashionable trailing vines and vine motifs on furniture.

The fickle public lost interest in cast-iron decorations beginning with the simplistic designs of the Arts and Crafts Movement. It was totally out of fashion during the Art Deco decades.

Old cast-iron grill work, gates and fences may be classified as architectural salvage, but they have found their way into contemporary garden decor. So much so that a single gate can cost over $1,000, depending on the uniqueness of the design. And, fencing and gates are being reproduced to meet the demand. The early collectors were once able to find ornate design fence and balcony sections in southern cities such as Charleston, New Orleans, and Mobile. They have long since moved around the country to architectural salvage stores and auction houses, like "The Great Gatsby" who specialize in this category. Still, you could run across some cast-iron furnishings in one of those little out-of-the-way towns that is hidden by a super highway.

Along Rt. 23, Between Phoenixville, PA and Rt. 100

Hate to apologize before we begin, but this really is a better auction than we originally had planned - great Lionel and AF Standard Gauge, strong Post War, new Modern Era goods, plus a run of Pre- and Post War Lionel Catalogs.

Also, selling at noon time: the train contents of a collector's home that was destroyed by a tragic fire. Left him with what you will see here. If you have some old train "stuff" under your platform, why not add it to his pile as a gift, so that he can rebuild a semblance of a collection?

HO TRAINS, STRUCTURES & ACCESSORIES
10 A.M. SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 2001
RIDGE FIRE COMPANY BLUE ROOM

Mr. Iannucci liked to go out and buy trains. He didn't run them, and they weren't really displayed either, but boy, did he ever like to buy 'em! Kits to build buildings and RR structures were another big favorite. Then there were also ceramic Christmas houses. They looked kind of neat, too. All in all, he could have stocked two, maybe three hobby shops. Nice stuff. New. Clean. Boxed. Still in cello or blister paks.

Athearn, Fleischmann, Bachmann, Tyco, Play Art, AHM, Life-Like, Model Power, a sampling of Lionel "O" Gage, Plasticville & Lionel HO, Home Towne, Kibri, Atlas, Revell, Faller, AHM-Hoffman, Pola and many others.

Come buy it and take it home. But this time, unwrap it. Use it. Run it. Enjoy it and throw it away. No lists. To be sold country style. (Quick!)

We say HO (90% HO), also "N" scale and a few other things dropped in. All major producers are represented.

A 10% buyer's premium will be applied. No absentee bids accepted for this one!

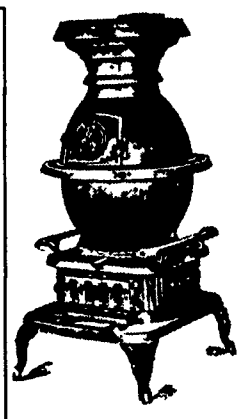
Antiques Questions And Answers



This drawing is of a bronze cup with an engraved floral design. Lead spots on the bottom are where there once three lets. It is marked "China." I dug it out of the ground near our summer home. The girl who lived across the street said there was one like it on legs. Any ideas?

J.R.M.-Marshfield, Mass.

The fact it is marked "China" indicates it was made after 1870. It is simply referred to as a tripod vessel. It could sell in a shop for around $50-$75.

My grandfather who worked on the railroad around the turn-of-the-century left me his Elgin, gold plated watch. My mom said this watch was used because their timing had to be synchronized to the second. There is a subface at the bottom of the regular face with a second hand (0-60). On the outside of the regular face, the minutes are numbered (1-60). Is it worth more than sentimental value? It still works.

B.S.-Cincinnati, Ohio

Your gold-filled railroad watch could be insured for replacement value of $500 or more.

Can you help me identify this small crimson color bowl on a raised pedestal? It has some kind of marks stamped in the clay that I have attempted to draw.

J.C.S.-Cincinnati, Ohio

The marks on your stem bowl appear to be Chinese. The glaze is known as "Flambe" and the wavy streaking motif is typical. This type of glaze, usually with turquoise streaking was done during the Ch'ien Lung dynasty (1736-96). However, it would have a reign or seal mark. Yours was probably made between 1909-1911. It could sell in a shop for $300-$400.

This Gaudy Dutch platter, c.1797, Carnation flower pattern, was given to me by a friend who passed away. I would like to know its value.

H.W.H.-Cincinnati, Ohio

Unfortunately, you didn't mention any marks on the back of your platter. Gaudy Dutch was made in 1800-1820 in England in 17 patterns, including carnation. It was an attempt to copy the colorful Japanese Imari patterns. Your platter could sell in a shop for over $1,000.

Ring Provides Rigidity To Fan Housing

PIQUA, Ohio — For more than 75 years, the name Hartzell Fan, Inc has meant quality and efficiency in industrial air moving equipment.

HartKool made by Hartzell Fan, Inc., a livestock cooling fan, features a spun steel orifice ring which provides rigidity to the fan housing. The fan includes propeller "tip seal" for lower horsepower and improved airflow.

The fans feature cast aluminum airfoil propellers, integral OSHA approved guards, durable high-quality finish, and an energy efficient 115/230 motor complete with grounded cord.

All Hartzell HartKool fans are performance-tested in an AMCA-accredited test facility in accordance with AMCA Standard 230 (Laboratory Methods of Testing Air Circulating Fans for Rating).

Recirculated air provides spot cooling and heat stress relief with better results using fewer fans and lower energy costs. HartKool fans offer more effective cooling and reduced maintenance. Additionally, the fans aid in the control of the bothersome flying insects.

Pit Additives Research Shows Results

DES MOINES, Iowa — Results of the latest checkoff-funded study conducted as part of the industry's ongoing Odor Solutions Initiative (OSI) will help producers make decisions about using products to curb odor. The unbiased research was performed in cooperation with Purdue University.

In the research, 35 pit additives were tested for effects on odor, ammonia and hydrogen sulfide gas emissions as well as fertilizer value of the manure.

"With increased environmental regulation, it's more important than ever for all hog producers to use this type of research to narrow the choices of products," says National Pork Board President John Kellogg, a pork producer from Yorkville, Ill. The chairman from Yorkville, Ill. The chairman of the pork industry's Odor Initiatives Committee says, "No matter the size of a hog operation, it's too expensive for each producer to use on-farm trial-and-error testing to find the best products."

Manure storage pit additive products were extensively evaluated at the Purdue University Agricultural Engineering Laboratory. Vendors voluntarily submitted their products to participate in the study. Hydrogen sulfide and ammonia were measured daily throughout each of three 42-day testing periods. All product results were compared to the untreated manure results.

With 95 percent certainty, seven products reduced hydrogen sulfide emissions and eight reduced ammonia emissions. Two of the products that reduced hydrogen sulfide also reduced ammonia. With 75 percent certainty, four products reduced odor, three reduced ammonia. Three of the odor-reducing products also reduced hydrogen sulfide. The fourth odor-reducing product also reduced ammonia.

The research report serves as a producer reference tool. When approached by a vendor or considering the use of an additive, the producer will find valuable information from the project results to form a decision. The 200-page report has a summary for each product, including a manufacturer/marketer product description, method and rate of application to the manure storage pits, any unique application directions needed to calculate the amount of product to be applied and the current retail price. There are descriptions of each product and its activity as compared to untreated manure columns.

The checkoff-funded report is available as a 200-page book and on the Internet at www.porkboard.org in the "Especially for Producers" section marked "OSI Results: Manure Pit Additive Testing."

Pioneer® Brand 11A44 Inoculant Now Recommended For High-Moisture Corn

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., is now recommending the use of Pioneer® brand 11A44 inoculant on high-moisture corn to improve bunk life and help feed stay fresher and cooler both in storage and in the feedbunk. 11A44 was introduced in 2000 for use on corn silage as well as cereal and grass silage. Research studies conducted by Pioneer microbiologists show the inoculant offers similar benefits when applied to high-moisture corn.

11A44 contains the unique and proprietary Lactobacillus buchneri (L. buchneri) bacterium. The product preserves nutritional quality by reducing nutrient losses from spoilage- and heat-causing organisms.

"The L. buchneri bacterium improves aerobic stability and bunk life in high-moisture shelled corn by an average of 72 hours compared to untreated grain in 10 trials," says Dr. Bill Mahanna, nutritional sciences manager at Pioneer. "Our trial work shows that when 11A44 is applied to high-moisture corn with 68 to 80 percent dry matter, it is as effective as 10-pounds per ton of propionic acid for extending bunk life.

"However, the big difference is that 11A44 is less damaging to equipment and more economical. Propionic acid can cost as much as $10 per treated ton and can be corrosive to equipment," Mahanna adds.

The heterofermentative L. buchneri bacterium found in 11A44 anaerobically degrades lactic acid to primarily acetic acid. Thus, 11A44 is especially useful in maintaining the bunk life of high-moisture corn for producers who fill and feed out slowly.

Reduction in total losses (storage to feedbunk) are dramatically reduced compared to corn or silage that is experiencing heating and palatability problems.

11A44 will be available in either water-soluble or free-flowing granular formulations for easy and convenient application. Each package treats 50 tons.

For more information about 11A44 for use on high-moisture shelled corn, contact your local provider of Pioneer products.

Farm Storage Loans Available From FSA

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Jenifer K. Hershey, county executive director, recently announced that Farm Storage Facility Loans are now available through the Farm Service Agency (FSA).

"At a time when commercial storage facilities are at maximum capacity and charging premium rates nationwide, on-farm storage provides producers with an attractive alternative," said Hershey.

The Farm Service Agency is offering seven-year, low-cost loans to grain producers desiring to build new or upgrade existing storage facilities and related essential, permanently affixed drying or handling equipment. Eligible loan opportunities include, but are not limited to:

- New conventional-type cribs or bins, oxygen-limiting and other upright silo-type structures, and flat-type storage structures designed for whole grain storage.
- Perforated floors, safety equipment, quality improvement equipment, electrical equipment and concrete components essential for a fully functional storage facility.
- Remodeling existing storage facilities.

According to Hershey, marketing flexibility is the primary benefit gained from on-farm storage facilities. "Privately owned facilities give producers control over where and when they sell their crops, increasing their opportunity to get the best price for their crop," said Hershey.

Farm Storage Facility Loans must be approved prior to site preparation, equipment purchase or construction, and must be secured by a promissory note and security agreement. Special real estate provisions apply for loans exceeding $50,000 or when the aggregate outstanding loan balance exceeds $50,000.

The maximum loan amount will be 85 percent of the net cost of the applicant's needed storage or handling equipment, not to exceed $100,000 per borrower. A minimum downpayment to the supplier or contractor is required to bridge the gap between the net cost of the storage facility and the loan amount.

Fixed interest rates on Farm Storage Facility Loans are equivalent to the rate of interest charged on U.S. Treasury Securities of comparable maturity on the date the loan is approved. As of May 2001, the annual interest rate is five percent.

"Although we are in the early stages of 2001 crops, advance planning for storage will mean one less decision that needs to be at harvest, allowing time to develop marketing strategies to maximize potential income," said Hershey.

For detailed applicant and facility eligibility criteria regarding Farm Storage Facility Loans, and to schedule an appointment to file an application, contact the Lebanon County office at (717) 272-3908 or visit FSA on the World Wide Web at http://www.fsa.usda.gov.

Sen. Clinton Promotes Conservation In New York

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton joined a bipartisan group of her colleagues recently in introducing bipartisan legislation to promote farmland conservation in New York and around the country. The Conservation Security Act would provide financial incentives for farmers to use environmentally friendly agricultural practices on their farmland.

"From Watertown to Oneonta, New York farms are a vital part of this state's economy, making agriculture New York's top industry. Products grown on farms around New York make their way to homes and kitchen tables around the country — and the world," Sen. Clinton said. "By offering farmers critical incentives to promote conservation of their land, water and energy, we will help to protect our beautiful natural resources, while helping to fuel our vital farm economy."

Since agricultural conservation first became a priority in the 1930s, federal funding for conservation assistance has fallen over 50 percent. The Conservation Security Act aims to reverse this dangerous trend.

"Farmers across New York State have consistently supported voluntary, incentive-based conservation programs like those outlined in this bill," New York Farm Bureau National Affairs Director Kyle A. Stewart said. "Empire State farmers have proven that stewardship of the environment and economic viability is achievable at the same time. New York Farm Bureau appreciates Sen. Clinton's recognition of this approach to environmental conservation."

"Historically, farmers have been our country's greatest conservationists, acting as stewards of the land to protect our clean air and water and preserve our nation's beautiful natural landscape," Sen. Clinton said. "But farmers face tough market conditions and some are struggling with severe economic hardship. The financial incentives outlined in this legislation would ease the burden on farmers who want to use environmentally-friendly practices on their land."

Sen. Clinton is an original co-sponsor of the Conservation Security Act, sponsored by Sen. Tom Harkin (D-IA). The bill establishes a voluntary agricultural conservation policy, providing incentive payments to farmers who use environmentally-sensitive conservation practices.

Producers of all agricultural products, such as fruits, vegetables, livestock and speciality crops, would be eligible. In addition, farmers and ranchers may continue to receive payments from other federal agriculture conservation programs that cover non-Conservation Security Act land. The Conservation Security Act has several original co-sponsors, including New York Sen. Charles E. Schumer.

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead – like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.

Farm Link Sponsors CSA Project Meeting

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Producers and beginning farmers who would like to learn how to establish an innovative method of selling their produce are invited to attend a Farm Link sponsored meeting at Maysie's Farm Conservation Center on June 21 from 7 p.m.-9:30 p.m.

Sam Cantrell, the owner of Maysie's Farm Conservation Center, will provide information on how to start a Community Supported Agriculture project, or CSA.

CSA, or subscription farming, is essentially grower contracting and can be applied to any type of farm. The producer "contracts" with the consumer to provide a specific type of product during a specific time period and with a specific delivery date.

Cantrell's customers pick up their produce at the farm. He will describe how he started his CSA in 1997 and will provide a blueprint for participants on how to start a CSA in their own communities. He will also talk about his marketing strategies and farming practices, his machinery, and provide a tour of his farm.

Information on marketing trends and tips for developing subscription and/or CSA markets will be included. To complete the evening, ways to protect farm investment, or risk management strategies will be offered. Those planning to attend should contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 by June 20.

Directions: To get to Maysie's Farm Conservation Center, take the Pennsylvania Turnpike to the Downingtown exit. Take Route 100 North for four miles to a traffic light at Route 401. Turn left at the light headed west for about 100 yards and take the first left onto St. Andrews Lane. After passing a church, the road turns into a dirt road. Maysie's Farm is the first place on the left at 15 St. Andrews Lane.

Hesston Balers Model 4755

The new Hesston® 4755 creates a half-ton bale that's perfect for either transporting or feeding to your own stock

Wet or dry?

The 4755 easily handles both In fact, you can bale high-moisture crops and seal in high feed values without any equipment modifications

Plus, an optional bale ejector and roller chute let you discharge the last bale at the end of each day

But the secret to our big bale success is in the charge chamber

Hay enters the charge chamber, where it's held until it reaches a preset density

Get your three squares a day... and then some.

Only then is it fed, triggered by a sensor, into the bale chamber for final compression

Unmatched consistency.

Since one charge makes one flake, you get unmatched bale consistency regardless of the crop or ground speed

That's the Hesston difference, and it's backed by 20 years of field experience

Stop by today and check out the 4755 and its new labor-saving 4720 Bale Accumulator

Nobody knows hay like HESSTON

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:

- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED
is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.

TOP HERD In Pennsylvania Feeds

PURINA ULTIMATE EXT

When you think of a barn-full of beautiful, high producing, mature cows with the top protein herd average in Pennsylvania, you stop at Friend-Lea Farm in Cambria County. Located in the rolling productive countryside east of Ebensburg, Jim and Adena Harteis and their children Mike, Lindsey, John, and Luke have worked the family farm starting in 1968. Their concentrated effort to develop long-lasting cows comes from a family philosophy of several generations ago that concludes you need "old cows and young chickens" to make money farming.

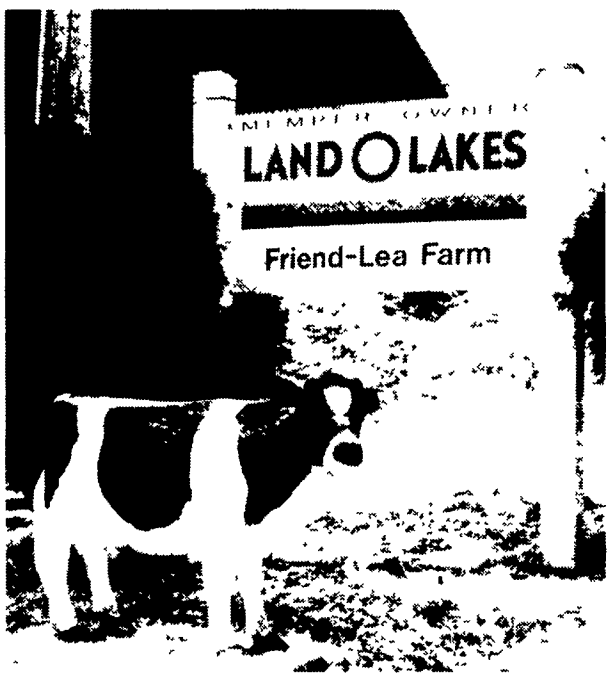
Of course, there are no chickens here, but there are mature cows, lots of them. Of the 90-plus head in the milking string, one-third have produced 100,000 lbs milk lifetime. And five cows have produced over a million pounds of milk. The trend to breed "disposable cows" that stay in the herd only one or two years has no place here.

"When you expect your cows to stay around a long time, you manage your herd so they do," Harteis said. "You take care of the basics right now, whenever you see a problem. Hoof trimming, water supply, reproductive program, dry cow conditioning, vaccination, and a good feeding program–these things all contribute to a successful herd. When I first started farming we didn't have the extensive and good technical assistance available that we have now. I just need to get the right professional assistance integrated into our herd and farming operation."

Much of the herd traces to one cow purchased at the 1986 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention Sale. Walebe Bell Jessica, VG, has lifetime credits of 179,000 lbs. of milk and her four daughters in the herd have produced a combined total of more than 1 million pounds of milk. The top cow in the herd produced 232.6 lbs. per day, and individual records include 47,000 lb. lactations on top of the 47,000 lb. lactations. Generation after generation have these long-life production credits too.

Harteis puts his management style into a simple formula–GNC. GNC=Genetics, Nutrition, and Care. The genetics comes from using bulls that have 90-plus repeatability and the care comes from doing the little things immediately. The nutrition comes from Purina feeds.

"A lot of our success here must be given to Purina feeds," Harteis said. "I tend to turn the feeding program over to whomever I work with. I say 'the feed room is yours, if you do a good job." And since 1995, Purina has had the feed room at Friend-Lea. Along with home grown corn silage, haylage, dry hay, and high moisture corn, a TMR ration is balanced with 38% concentrate and high producing cows top dressed with Ultimate EXT. Harteis adds additional levels of vitamins and minerals. The Purina dry cow program is especially liked by Harteis. "I think their Prepare 50 dry cow program is especially good. The fresh cows come in ready to go."



It's hard to argue with success. One cow in the herd will go over 400,000 lbs. milk lifetime with her present lactation. And all five of the cows that have produced more than a million pounds are bred back and milking more than 100 lbs. per day. That's why Purina continues to own the feed room at Friend-Lea Farm.
